THE TOURIST-HISTORIC CITY
Retrospect and Prospect of Managing the Heritage City

G. J. Ashworth
and
J. E. Tunbridge
Contents

- Preface vii
- Acknowledgements ix
- List of figures xi
- List of tables xiii

1 The concept: origin, nature and scope 1
- The city between two futures
- The dimensions of the tourist-historic city
- Conceptual scope and structure
- Global scope and selection
- The tourist-historic city and social constructivism

2 The historic city 10
- Motivations and justifications
- The rise of the urban conservation movement
- The internationalisation of urban conservation
- The consequences of success
- Delimiting the historic city
- The historic city: from form to function

3 The tourist city 53
- Tourism and heritage
- Tourism and cities
- Tourism and heritage and cities
- Modelling the tourist city

4 Modelling the tourist-historic city 83
- The nature and use of a model
- Establishing the model
- Variations from the model
- Limitations of the model

5 Uses and users of the tourist-historic city 105
- Cohabitation and coincidence
- The tourist-historic city as a location for urban functions
- Coexisting functions of the tourist-historic city
- The users of the tourist-historic city

6 The planning, management and marketing of the tourist-historic city 135
- The inevitability of management
- Types of planning and management
Contents

A geography of planning approaches
Classifying tourist-historic cities

7 The management of monofunctional tourist-historic cities
Resource based historic gems
Demand based tourist-historic cities
The monofunctional tourist-historic city in review

8 The management of tourist-historic elements in large multifunctional cities
The context
The big league tourist-historic cities
The second division
The large multifunctional city: convergence

9 The management of tourist-historic elements in medium-sized multifunctional cities
General characteristics
European regional capitals: Norwich, Groningen and Kraków
North American ‘core gems’: Québec City, Charleston and Savannah
Nurtured tourist-historic city: Ottawa
Constrained tourist-historic city: Pietermaritzburg
Urban revitalisation: socio-economic motivations and the tourist-historic city
The medium-sized multifunctional city: a synthesis

10 Values, issues and conclusions
Values, contentious issues and the present perspective
Conclusions for conservation
Conclusions for tourism
Conclusions for the city

References

Author Index
Subject Index
Place Index

Somene ten y been gesta focus our enironme
Our hop fulfulle we and occas tourist-historic have not on extended and the world de mand for predicted by the economy. Europe i to continent a our own the others in management non-comm care and more active use! that have e of practice industry, etc. pursu
Historic Ci
different ap
This is a commit its legislati secondly, it outcomes i same. How world have remains as into ‘gem-c world.
In terms