Contents

A7

49
Precisions on the Present State of Architecture and City Planning
Reprint of the Original American Edition

B333
Original Lecture Sketches

C397
Explanatory Notes
PRECISIONS
ON THE PRESENT STATE
OF ARCHITECTURE AND CITY PLANNING

WITH AN AMERICAN PROLOGUE
A BRAZILIAN COROLLARY

FOLLOWED BY
THE TEMPERATURE OF PARIS
AND THE ATMOSPHERE OF MOSCOW
CONTENTS

PREFACE TO THE SECOND FRENCH PRINTING .......................................................... vii
NOTICE ............................................................................................................................ xv
AMERICAN PROLOGUE .................................................................................................... 1
To Free Oneself Entirely of Academic Thinking ......................................................... 23
Techniques Are the Very Basis of Poetry ...................................................................... 35
Architecture in Everything, City Planning in Everything .............................................. 67
A Dwelling at Human Scale ......................................................................................... 85
The Undertaking of Furniture ...................................................................................... 105
The Plan of the Modern House .................................................................................... 123
A Man = A Dwelling; Dwellings = A City: The Plan of a Contemporary City of Three Million Inhabitants ........................................................... 141
A House—A Palace: The Search for Architectural Unity ........................................... 159
The World City and Some Perhaps Untimely Considerations .................................... 215
BRAZILIAN COROLLARY ............................................................................................... 233

APPENDIX

The Temperature of Paris ............................................................................................. 249
The Atmosphere of Moscow ........................................................................................ 259
“An Aside” ................................................................................................................... 267