China’s Presence in the Middle East
The Implications of the One Belt, One Road Initiative

Edited by Anoushiravan Ehteshami and Niv Horesh

Published in association with the Sheikh Nasser al-Mohammad al Sabah Programme at Durham University.
Contents

List of contributors vii

Introduction: China’s One Belt, One Road vision – implications for the Middle East 1

NIV HORESH

PART I 7

1 Why the Middle East matters to China 9

ANDREW SCOBELL

2 Rocking the boat? China’s “belt and road” and global order 24

TIM SUMMERS

3 Vision, revision and supervision: the politics of China’s OBOR and AIIB and their implications for the Middle East 38

YITZHAK SHICHER

4 Viability of Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank’s financials and objectives 54

SARA HSU

PART II 65

5 OBOR and the dawn of a new era in Sino-Saudi ties 67

SEAN FOLEY
6 Complex interdependence in the China–Saudi–US triangle? Assessing shifts in the issue area linkages between energy trade and security ties
PHILIP GATER-SMITH

7 OBOR’s impact on Sino-Israeli relations
YORAM EVRON

8 Economic and cultural interactions between Israel and China: opportunities and challenges
WANG YU

9 How do Palestinians perceive China’s rise?
GUY BURTON

10 China’s “One Belt, One Road” (OBOR) initiative: envisioning Iran’s role
JOHN CALABRESE

11 The One Belt, One Road in China’s grand strategy
ANOUSHIRAVAN EHTESHAMI

Index
210