Yda Schreuder

Amsterdam’s Sephardic Merchants and the Atlantic Sugar Trade in the Seventeenth Century
CONTENTS

1 The Atlantic Sugar Trade: Amsterdam’s Sephardic Merchants in the Seventeenth Century
   1.1 Introduction 1
   1.2 The Portuguese Nation: Terms and Definitions 7
   1.3 A Historical-Geographic Perspective 12
   1.4 Amsterdam: The Emerging Metropolitan Center of Europe 15
   1.5 The Merchant Network System 22
   1.6 Summary and Chapter Outline 27

2 The Development of the Sephardic Jewish Sugar Trade Network
   2.1 Westward Expansion of Sugar Cultivation 31
   2.2 New Christians and Sephardic Jews in the Sugar Trade and Cultivation 38
   2.3 Sugar Production in Brazil Under Portuguese Rule 42
   2.4 The Development of the Sephardic Sugar Trade Network 44
   2.5 Amsterdam, the Portuguese Nation, and the Sugar Trade 54
   2.6 The West India Company and Dutch Brazil (1630–1654) 65
   2.7 Summary and Conclusion 73

3 The British Caribbean World: Barbados
   3.1 The “Myth of the Dutch” and the “Sephardic Moment” 77
   3.2 The “Myth of the Dutch” and the Loss of Brazil 88
   3.3 The “Myth of the Dutch” and Sir William Davidson 97
CONTENTS

3.4 The Dutch and the Slave Trade
3.5 The "Sephardic Moment" and the Amsterdam Sugar Market
3.6 Summary and Conclusion

4 Amsterdam's Dutch and Sephardic Merchants in the Atlantic Supply Trade and the Sugar Trade in the Seventeenth Century
4.1 Evidence from Freight Records
4.2 Portuguese Jewish Merchants in Amsterdam in the First Half of the Seventeenth Century
4.3 The Amsterdam Sugar Trade in the Second Half of the Seventeenth Century
4.4 Dutch Merchants in Trade with Barbados in the Mid-Seventeenth Century
4.5 Sephardic Jewish Merchants in Trade with Barbados in the Second Half of the Seventeenth Century
4.6 Summary and Conclusion

5 The Mission of Menasseh Ben Israel and Cromwell's Western Design
5.1 The British Trade and Navigation Act of 1651
5.2 Menasseh Ben Israel's Mission to Cromwell and Whitehall
5.3 The London Sephardic and New Christian Community
5.4 The Emergence of the Sephardic Merchant Community of Barbados
5.5 The Sephardic Communities of Amsterdam, Brazil, and Barbados
5.6 Summary and Conclusion

6 Sephardic Merchants and the Second Barbados: Jamaica
6.1 The "Second Barbados"
6.2 Jamaica Under Spanish Rule and British Occupation
6.3 Clandestine and Legal Trade of Port Royal: The "Sephardic Moment"
6.4 The Emergence of Jamaica as a Sugar Colony
6.5 London and the Caribbean Reexport Trade
6.6 Summary and Conclusion

101 105 114 119 125 130 138 146 155 159 164 172 176 182 196 199 203 209 217 221 228
7 The Atlantic Sugar Trade at the End of the Seventeenth Century
  7.1 Transit and Reexport Trade 233
  7.2 Transit Trade from Curacao and St. Eustatius 236
  7.3 The Sephardic Merchant Network and Amsterdam's Refining Industry 241
  7.4 The Anglo-Dutch Sugar Reexport Trade 245
  7.5 Conclusion 256

Appendix 1: Notes on Evidence from Freight Records and Protocols at the Amsterdam City Archives 263

Appendix 2: Notes on Sugar Import and Export Trade 267

Bibliographic Essay 271

Index 277