Programmes and Strategies for Counteracting Unemployment and the Promotion of Productive Employment in Poland

Mieczysław Kabaj

ILO–CEET Working Paper No. 15

All views in ILO–CEET Reports are those of the authors and should not be attributed to the ILO. Comments would be welcome.

ILO–CEET
International Labour Organisation
Central and Eastern European Team

Address: Budapest H - 1066, Mozsár u. 14, Hungary
Table of Contents

Introduction

Part I. Strategic Diagnosis

1. Human Resources and the Role of Employment in Economic Development
2. Fall in the Employment of Human Resources and Structural Revolution
3. Unemployment
   1. Unemployment: Level and Structure
   2. Three Aspects of Unemployment
4. Major Causes of Unemployment
5. Costs of Unemployment
6. Employment and Unemployment until the Year 2000
   1. Projection of Increase in Labour supply
   3. Projected Unemployment until the Year 2000

Part II. Programmes and Strategies for Counteracting Unemployment

1. Evaluation of Efficiency of Applied Methods of Counteracting Unemployment
2. The Impact of Active Labour Market Programmes on Unemployment
3. An Integrated Programme for the Promotion of Employment and the Reduction of Unemployment (Towards an Employment-oriented Development Strategy)
   A. Nine Macroeconomic Elements of the Programme
       1. Promoting Optimal Non-inflationary Effective Demand
       2. Promoting employment through better utilisation of productive capacities and multiple shift-working
       3. Promoting investment
       4. Housing construction programme
       5. Promoting small enterprise development and self-employment
       6. Expansion of exports and optimisation of imports
       7. Promotion of rational restructuring
       8. Promotion of employment through reduction of social taxes on wages
       9. Better co-ordination of vocational education with current and expected labour market demand
   B. Active Labour Market Programmes
   C. Deregulation of the Labour Market and Flexible Employment
   D. Institutional Conditions for Counteracting Unemployment

Concluding Remarks
