

SOCIAL SECURITY PENSIONS

Development and reform

Edited by

Colin Gillion • John Turner
Clive Bailey • Denis Latulippe

385 393 172

International Labour Office • Geneva

CONTENTS

Preface	v
Acknowledgements	xvii
The International Labour Organization	xxi
Abbreviations	xxiii
1 General overview and main issues	1
About this book	1
The climate of change	3
Public and non-public pension programmes	3
Development: The structure of pension schemes and their problems	5
Reform: The search for a new balance	14
Introduction to the regional briefs	19
Introduction to the technical briefs	22
2 Public and non-public pension schemes	29
The public-private mix in developing countries	29
The public-private mix in developed and middle-income countries	30
Overview of the historical development of the public-private mix in developed countries	31
Effects of the public sector on the size of the private sector	32
The choice between public and private	35
Reasons for privatization	36
Part I Development: The structure of pension schemes and their problems	39
<hr/>
3 Retirement benefits	41
Entitlement conditions	41
Benefit amount	45
Form in which benefits are received	51
Progressivity	65

Contents

4 Invalidity and survivors' benefits	69
Invalidity pensions	69
Invalidity schemes within national social protection schemes	74
How invalidity benefit schemes influence behaviour	76
Employment-related schemes	82
Encouraging employment	83
Conclusions on invalidity pensions	87
Survivors' benefits	87
Equity and coverage problems	91
Conclusions on survivors' benefits	95
5 Pensioners and social assistance benefits	98
A taxonomy of social assistance	98
The size of social assistance	99
The structure of social assistance	102
Level and structure of social assistance for pensioners	119
6 Financing pension systems	126
The development of pension expenditures	127
Financing social security pensions	132
Sources of financing	138
Contribution schemes	140
Conclusions: Policy choices	151
7 The management of investment	154
Investment in the context of four models of funded mandatory retirement pension schemes	155
Financial and economic preconditions for developing funded pension schemes	158
Management issues for mandatory retirement benefit funds	165
Required regulation and necessary regulatory capabilities	173
Investment performance of mandatory funded schemes	187
8 Coverage and its shortfalls	193
Trends in population coverage	193
Reasons for exclusion from coverage	198
Approaches to the extension of coverage	203
Schemes for informal sector workers	210
9 Governance and administration	217
Objectives of good governance	217
The stakeholders	219
The fundamental governance questions	227
Problems at the institutional level	239
Problems with administration at the operational level	244
10 Contribution evasion	251
The problem of evasion	251
The prevalence of evasion	254

Contribution evasion compared to tax evasion	255
Reasons for contribution evasion	255
Reasons why governments tolerate evasion or are unable to prevent it	265
11 Pension transfers and the redistribution of income	270
Intergenerational redistribution	272
Intragenerational redistribution	288
The structure of pension schemes	295
12 The risks to individuals	301
Demographic risks	302
Economic risks	306
Political risks	315
Institutional risks	317
Individual risks	319
Annex: Pension guarantees	327
13 Economic effects	336
Desired economic effects of social security retirement benefit schemes	337
Labour market effects	341
The link between national savings and economic growth	353
The link between personal saving and national saving	361
14 The consequences for public finances	367
Pensions in national and government accounts	367
Financial links between pension schemes and government accounts	370
Financial flows from pension schemes to government accounts	371
Flows and links between government accounts and pension schemes	372
The effect of pension financing on public deficits and debt	376
Pension financing and public financing strategies	380
Annex: Pensions in the hierarchy of government accounts in Turkey	386
Conclusion to Part I	390
Part II Reform: The search for a new balance	393
<hr/>
15 The normative basis for policy	395
The guiding principles of pension reform and development	399
Implications of the principles	404
16 Extending coverage	409
Extending existing social insurance schemes	410
Adapting existing social insurance schemes	412
Special schemes for the self-employed and the informal sector	413
Developing tax-financed pension schemes	417
17 Improving governance, management and compliance	424
Planning, policy and coordination issues	424
Institutional issues	426
Reviewing public/private responsibility for pensions	427

Contents

Making public social security institutions more effective	430
Improving the collection of contributions	431
The unification of social security schemes	433
Conclusions	434
18 Influencing the age of retirement	437
Retirement and retirement policy	437
Policy options	443
Policy considerations	443
Postponed retirement	449
Other government policies affecting retirement age	451
19 Developing pluralistic designs and flexible structures	453
Determinants of the structure of retirement income schemes	455
The structure of retirement income schemes	464
First tier	468
Second tier	473
Defined benefit versus defined contribution plans	475
Annex: Administrative costs in public and private pension plans: What makes the difference?	478
20 The reform process and its political management	487
Different reform processes	487
Reaching consensus on social security reform	488
Implementing reform	494
Conclusion to Part II	496
Regional Briefs	499
<hr/>
1 Asia and the Pacific	499
Socioeconomic overview	499
Overview of social security systems	500
Existing pension arrangements	504
Major developments and reform initiatives	506
2 Africa	515
Social protection and economic development in Africa	517
Issues relating to pension arrangements	519
Developments and objectives	525
3 Latin America and the Caribbean	532
Historical perspective	533
Coverage	534
Benefits	536
Pensionable age	536
Minimum period of contributions	537
Financing	537
The pension reform movement	540
Conclusion	545

4 Arab states of the Middle East	546
Socioeconomic overview	547
Social security retirement benefit programmes	547
5 Central and Eastern Europe	553
Socioeconomic overview	553
Overview of social protection systems	554
Retirement, invalidity and survivors' benefits	555
Conceptual deficiencies and priority problems	569
6 The OECD countries	576
Overview of the economic environment	577
Overview of OECD social security systems	577
Issues in social security retirement income reform	583
Conclusions: Trends in social security	596
Technical Briefs	598
<hr/>
1 The quantitative modelling of pension reform and development	598
The social budget model	599
The pension model	602
Modelling distributional effects	605
2 Social security Conventions and Recommendations of the ILO	609
Social Security (Minimum Standards) Convention, 1952 (No. 102)	613
3 Pensions for public sector employees	618
The variety of retirement schemes available to employees in the public sector	619
Linkage to national pension schemes: Separate or integrated?	619
Pension coverage	620
Public sector trends and policy issues	621
Appendix I	624
Appendix II	629
4 The impact of demography	630
Case-based projection for immature schemes	630
Typical cost developments	631
Sensitivity testing	634
Statistical annex	637
The demography of pensions	639
Employment and retirement of older workers	659
Pension coverage	675
Sources and level of retirement income	681
Investments and capital markets	701
Glossary	707
Bibliography	713
Index	745