CONTENTS

The author 9
Foreword 11
Acknowledgements 13
Introduction 17

1 Regulation and markets 19
Ticket touts are harmful and wicked. They should be stamped out by law 21
The conduct of an industry – in particular, how it serves consumers – is improved by government regulation 23
The state should step in to protect the environment 25
Firms should not make profits 27

2 International trade 31
One country should not cut its tariffs unless others do 33
Free trade should be fair 35
Free trade causes unemployment 38
The country should be more competitive 42

3 International finance 45
Foreign exchange speculation should be stopped 47
A current account deficit is a problem 49
EMU will eliminate turbulence in the ERM 52
Interest rates and exchange rates 55
Britain should join the euro at the ‘correct’ exchange rate 58

4 Inflation 61
Raising interest rates causes inflation 63
Credit controls are better than interest rates 65
Credit controls – do they work? 67
Devaluation causes inflation 70
Price rises above inflation are bad 72
Relative price changes can be ignored 75
Government-imposed price rises have worsened inflation 78
Controlling prices controls inflation 81
Inflation, real values and ‘government money’ 84
Confusion about inflation 87

5 Fiscal policy: taxation 91
Governments can precisely manage the economy by fiscal policy 93
Employers contribute towards workers’ benefits 95
Taxes should go up to slow inflation 99
The government should place extra taxes on companies that make ‘excess profits’ 103
The Chancellor can predict the effect of tax allowances on behaviour 106

6 Fiscal policy: government spending 109
Investment is a good thing, and should be encouraged by every means in the government’s power 111
Government borrowing should be guided by the ‘Golden Rule’ 114
Welfare benefits should not be cut when the public finances are in surplus

The 'Iron Chancellor' and government spending

The Chancellor should reduce his spending plans

7 Monetary policy: theory
High interest rates are bad for the economy, and the government should reduce them forthwith
International capital mobility has increased, so governments have little control over economic activity
Rising bond yields will slow the economy
A boost to demand from monetary policy will help growth
It is sensible to judge past decisions in the light of current information

8 Monetary policy: practice
The Bank of England should rescue a failed or failing bank
Monetary and exchange-rate policy can be conducted independently of each other
Scotland should be represented on the MPC

9 Cost, price and value
Oil companies have been robbing the public by raising prices when they have inventories bought at previous, lower prices
Cutting out the middleman brings down prices
What a good costs to produce determines its worth
10 Labour markets

They’re not well paid. They should get a living wage

‘EC gives better maternity deal to UK women’

Social dumping is a problem

With population growth continuing, it will be harder and harder to find jobs for everyone

Imposing labour standards helps the poor and protects domestic workers

Workers should hold shares in the company they work for

About the IEA