Managing common property in an age of globalisation
Zimbabwean experiences

EDITED BY
Emmanuel Manzungu
Godfrey Chikowore
Dorothy Mushayavanhu
Dennis Shoko

WEAVER PRESS
A 236865
Contents

Notes: editors and contributors v
Acknowledgements ix
Foreword xi

Management and use of common property resources in an era of globalisation: an introduction – France Maphosa 1

SECTION 1
Local participation and the commons in Zimbabwe

Chapter 1: Common property rights and the empowerment of communal farmers in Zimbabwe: institutional legal framework and policy challenges under globalisation – Medicine Masiiwa 15

Chapter 2: Global rhetoric and local realities: the case of Zimbabwe’s water reform – Emmanuel Manzungu 31

Chapter 3: Institutional configurations around forest reserves in Zimbabwe – Frank Matose 45

Chapter 4: Small-scale mining and alluvial gold panning within the Zambezi basin: an ecological time-bomb and tinderbox for future conflict among riparian states – Dennis Shoko 67

Chapter 5: How far the destination? Decentralisation and devolution in governance of the commons under CAMPFIRE – Patrick W. Mamimine 87

Chapter 6: In search of a better CAMPFIRE: the case of the Manyuchi Dam fisheries project – Rudo A. Sanyanga 103

SECTION 2
Transboundary issues in common property management

Chapter 7: The role of physical planning in the management of transboundary natural resources in southern Africa – Liliana Vassileva 121
Chapter 8: The influence of Geographical Information Systems technology on the management of common property in southern Africa – Ivan Farayi Muzondo 137

Chapter 9: Prospects for transboundary natural resources management in the Southern African Development Community – Godfrey Chikowore 153

Chapter 10: Global or local commons? Biodiversity, indigenous knowledge and intellectual property rights – Morris Mudiwa 173

Conclusion: Whither common property management in Zimbabwe? – Godfrey Chikowore, Emmanuel Manzungu and France Maphosa 193