Terrorism, Gulf Security and Palestine:
Key Issues for an EU-GCC Dialogue

Gerd NONNEMANN, Anoushiravan EHTESHAMI and Iris GLOSEMEYER

This paper is one of a series issuing from the work of the "Working Group for European Strategy towards the Gulf" which the Mediterranean Programme of the RSCAS has organised in co-operation with the Bertelsmann Foundation and the Bertelsmann Group of Policy Research at the Center of Applied Policy Research, University of Munich. No. 04

Policy Papers, RSC No. 02/2
CONTENTS

I. CONTEXT 5
   1. Key issues 5
   2. Limitations 8

II. ANALYSIS: GULF SECURITY, THE LINK WITH PALESTINE, AND TERRORISM 10
   1. A long-term basis for Gulf security 10
   2. Iran 14
      2.1. The nature of the Iranian regime 14
      2.2. The nature of Iranian foreign policy 17
      2.3. Iran’s role in the Gulf 18
   3. Iraq – long-term issues 20
   4. Iraq under Saddam Hussein 21
      4.1. The nature of the Iraqi regime 21
      4.2. The nature of Iraqi foreign policy 24
      4.3. Iraq’s role in the Gulf 25
      4.4. The question of sanctions, human rights and regional impact 25
   5. The GCC states, Terrorism and Islamist Dissent 27
      5.1. Overview 27
      5.2. Islamist opposition in Saudi Arabia, and the question of terrorism 30
         5.2.1. Shia Islamist opposition 30
         5.2.2. Sunni Islamist opposition 31
         5.2.3. The effects of Saudi Islamist opposition 35
   6. The case of Yemen 36
      6.1. The Nature of the Yemeni Regime 37
      6.2. Yemen and the GCC Security Dimension 39

III. THE GCC VIEW 43
   1. The regional long term 43
2. Iran: the foreseeable future
3. Iraq: the foreseeable future
4. Yemen
5. The link with Palestine and the Arab-Israeli conflict
6. The campaign against “terrorism”

IV. IMPLICATIONS FOR EUROPEAN POLICY POSITIONS IN THE EU-GCC DIALOGUE
1. General
2. Terrorism
3. Overall Gulf security
4. Iraq
5. Iran
6. Yemen
7. Palestine and the Arab-Israeli conflict

The Authors