Contents

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction: A History of Collaborative Relationships 1

PART I
Blurred Boundaries: Drug Research and Production in Britain and France before World War Two 13

1 Research Institutions and Pharmaceutical Laboratories before World War Two 17

2 Scientific Communities and Networks before World War Two 53

PART I
Conclusion 95

PART II
Collaborative Networks in War and Peace 97

3 Mobilizing for War: Making Penicillin in Britain and the United States 99

4 Collaboration and Resistance: Developing Penicillin and the Synthetic Anti-Histamines in France 135

PART II
Conclusion 167
Contents

PART III
Continuity and Change in Medical Science and Industry after World War Two 171

5 ‘Continuity through Revolution’ in France 173

6 ‘Revolution through Continuity’ in Britain 207

PART III
Conclusion 241

Conclusion: The Power of Rhetoric, and a Tale of Two Cultures 243

Notes 251
Bibliography 315
Index 343