

Property Economics

Property Rights, Creditor's Money, and the Foundations of the Economy

Edited by
Otto Steiger

Metropolis-Verlag
Marburg 2008

Contents

Notes on the Contributors	xiii
Acknowledgements	xviii
Property Economics: An Introduction Otto Steiger	xix
Note on the References	xxix

Part I: The Property-Based Theory of the Economy: Criticism and New Aspects

The Property Theories of Bethell, Pipes, and de Soto: Similarities and Differences in Emphasis as Compared with the Approach of Heinsohn, Stadermann, and Steiger

Thomas G. Betz	3
Heinsohn, Stadermann, and Steiger's "property theory of the economy"	4
Bethell's analysis of property rights in theory and history	9
Pipes's discussion of the relation between property and freedom	12
De Soto's analysis of the "missing ingredient" in developing countries	14
Similarities, differences, and conclusions	19
References	22

Property, Development, and Hernando de Soto's Approach: The End of Poverty

Ulf Heinsohn	25
What is economic development?	26

Property is lacking, but why is property important?	26
Orthodox and heterodox theories of development	41
Common law as an obstacle to economic development in English history	49
References	55

The Property Approach of Heinsohn and Steiger:

Questions from an Institutional Viewpoint

Hans G. Nutzinger	61
Methodological problems in the distinctions between different economic concepts	61
Possession, property, and ownership: Another look from a modified institutionalist viewpoint.....	64
The basic elements of New Institutional Economics	66
References	67

Some Observations on Heinsohn and Steiger's

"Property Theory of Interest and Money": A Short Comment

Augusto Graziani	69
Heinsohn and Steiger's central points.....	69
Main remarks on the "property theory of interest and money"	71
References	72

Power, the State, and the Institution of Property

Paul C. Martin	75
The institution of power and the institution of property: An alternative theory of interest and money	75
Why the property theory must presuppose a theory of power	83
Debts, power, and the economy	88

On the circulation of power.....	90
The German currency reform of 1948: A discourse (Paul C. Martin and Otto Steiger)	98
References	103

Part II: Property Economics: Fundamental Thoughts

Russian Patrimony and Its Political Consequences

Richard Pipes	113
The role of common law for the early development of property in England	113
Catherine the Great and the introduction of private property in Russia	116
The emancipation of serfs in Russia	128
The rise of a money-based economy in Russia	133
Concluding remarks on property, law, and liberty.....	136
References	137

Why Isn't the Whole World Developed?

On Property in the Third World

Tom Bethell	141
Richard Easterlin's famous question.....	141
Inputs without institutions.....	147
The missing ingredient.....	152
The lesson brought home	157
Appendix: If economists are so smart, why is Africa so poor? (Stephen Haber, Douglass C. North, and Barry R. Weingast).....	159
References	162

Dead Capital, Fluid Capital, and Money

Hernando de Soto	167
Clues from the past.....	168
Potential energy in assets	169
The hidden conversion process of the West.....	169
Capital and money.....	176
Fernand Braudel's bell jar.....	179
References	180

Collateral and Own Capital:The Missing Links in the Theory of the Rate of Interest and Money

Gunnar Heinsohn and Otto Steiger	181
Property and possession	182
Burdening and encumbrance.....	192
Forgotten precursors of the property theory of the economy.....	200
The discussion of good securities in classical and neoclassical economics.....	206
The discovery of property rights and the renaissance of collateral...210
Missing collateral and lack of own capital:
The subprime-mortgage crisis	215
References	218

Property Base:A Central Bank's Guide to Adequate Monetary Policy

Hans-Joachim Stadermann	223
The quantity of money: A misleading concept	223
The misunderstanding of gold and assets.....	227
The quantity equation once again.....	228

John Maynard Keynes and the equation of exchange	230
The supply of money	232
Refinancing property as a superior concept	234
References	239

Where Does the Market Come From? Why the Controversy
Between Polanyi's "Substantivists" and the "Formalist"
Neoclassical Protagonists of a Universal Market
Was Never Resolved

Gunnar Heinsohn	243
The stalemate in the controversy over the universality of markets	243
A solution to the controversy over the origin of markets	247
Where does property come from?	252
Property and the missing link to markets	256
References	258

The Fundamental Flaw in New Institutional Economics:
The Missing Distinction between Possession and Property

Otto Steiger	261
The emergence of private property rights	263
The fundamental flaw	266
References	270

Part III: The Institution of Property:
Its Interplay with Other Fields

Liquidity Crises of Private Corporations in Emerging Economies and International Bankruptcy Rules

Camille Cornand	275
------------------------------	-----

Recent changes in financial globalisation and its impact on international law	275
Financial globalisation and international property rights.....	278
The international bankruptcy framework and its implications in terms of international financial governance	284
What an international bankruptcy framework can learn from the property theory of the economy	291
International financial integration versus heterogeneity of national laws	293
References	295

Monetary Policy in a Post-Socialist Country:

The Central Bank of Latvia

Ramona Rupeika-Aboga	299
The recent history of the Latvian currency	299
The Bank of Latvia: Objectives and principles of monetary policy	300
Lack of domestic good securities?	302
The Bank of Latvia's currency board.....	305
The Bank of Latvia's monetary policy during the year 2002	312
References	316
Appendices	318

Property, Mineral Resources, and "Sustainable Development"

Rolf Steppacher	323
A new look at property and its implications for development	323
Possession and property: The core institutions of non-capitalist and capitalist societies	326
Property: A necessary condition of development	329
Property rights and economic rationality: Ecological and social considerations	335

“Property regimes in resource management”: Necessary differentiations between common, private, State, and “open access” regimes	347
Fourteen theses on property, exhaustible resources, and development	349
References	352

The Property-Based Theory of the Economy or Property Economics: Philosophical Aspects

Jan Beaufort	355
A new look at “Government-printed money”	355
Why Government-printed money does not differ from credit-issued money.....	357
Which rules control money and property distribution?.....	362
A desirable distribution of money and property.....	366
Three concluding theses.....	370
References	371

The Appeal of Money for Economic Growth: A Lesson from Goethe’s “Faust”

Marco Lehmann-Waffenschmidt	373
On the relation between economic growth and the supply of money.....	373
Money, growth, and “Faustian dynamics”	375
Credit money as the means to satisfy unlimited needs and wants	377
References	381