Contents

Acknowledgments ix

1 Communities and Workforce Development in the Era of Devolution
   Edwin Meléndez 1

Part 1: Emerging Labor Market Intermediaries

2 Competing for Contracts: Nonprofit Survival in an Age of Privatization
   M. Bryna Sanger 37

3 CBOs and the One-Stop Career Center System
   Ramón Borges-Méndez and Edwin Meléndez 77

4 Union-Sponsored Workforce Development Initiatives
   Beverly Takahashi and Edwin Meléndez 119

5 Addressing the Employment Challenge for the Formerly Homeless: Supportive Housing in New York City
   Alex Schwartz, Edwin Meléndez, and Sarah Gallagher 151

Part 2: Community-Based Workforce Development Initiatives for the Information Technology Sector

6 Workforce Development in the Information Technology Age
   Michael A. Stoll 191

7 Community Technology Centers: Training Disadvantaged Workers for Information Technology Jobs
   Lisa J. Servon 213

8 Beyond the First Job: Career Ladder Initiatives in Information Technology Industries
   Laura Wolf-Powers 253
Part 3: Recasting the Role of Community Colleges

9 Community Colleges, Welfare Reform, and Workforce Development
Edwin Meléndez, Luis M. Falcón, Carlos Suárez-Boulanger, Lynn McCormick, and Alexandra de Montrichard

10 Innovators Under Duress: Community Colleges in New York's Workfare Setting
Lynn McCormick

11 Community Colleges as Workforce Intermediaries: Building Career Ladders for Low-Wage Workers
Joan Fitzgerald

Part 4: New Directions in Community Collaborations and Partnerships

12 Interorganizational Networks among Community-Based Organizations
Héctor R. Cordero-Guzmán

13 Corporate-Community Workforce Development Collaborations
Stacey A. Sutton

The Authors

Index

About the Institute