Flexibilisation and Modernisation of the Turkish Labour Market

Editor: Roger Blanpain

Guest Editors: Frans Pennings and Nurhan Süral

Contributors
Toker Dereli
Peter Donders
Frank Hendrickx
Frans Pennings
Karin Sengers
Nurhan Süral
Martijn van Velzen
Peter van der Valk
Ton Wilthagen

This project was financed within the framework of the Matra Pre-accession Projects Programme, financed by the Netherlands Ministry of Foreign Affairs.
CONTENTS

Preface xi

List of Contributors xiii

List of Abbreviations xv

1. Introduction 1
   Frans Pennings and Nurhan Süral
   1.1 General 1
   1.2 The Relevance of the Flexibilisation Process 1
   1.3 The Historical Background to the Flexibility Discussion 4
      1.3.1 A Very Short Overview of the Developments up to the 1990s 4
      1.3.2 Preparation for Accession 6
   1.4 An Introduction to the Main Instruments and Actors 8
      1.4.1 The Main Statutory Instruments 8
      1.4.2 The Organisation of the Actors within the Labour Market 9
   1.5 The Project’s Progress 10

2. Flexibilisation and the Formal and Informal Labour Markets 13
   Toker Dereli, Karin Sengers and Peter Donders
   2.1 Introduction 13
   2.2 The Turkish Labour Market and the Acquis Comunautaire 14
      2.2.1 A View on the Acquis: the Employment Guidelines 14
      2.2.2 Turkey and the Acquis on the Employment Guidelines 16
   2.3 The Current Turkish Situation 18
      2.3.1 Employment and Unemployment: Facts and Figures 18
      2.3.2 Specific Problems with Regard to the Flexibility of the Turkish Labour Market 20
         2.3.2.1 The Informal Labour Market 20
         2.3.2.2 The Position of Women 22
         2.3.2.3 Sectoral Differences and Subcontracting 23
         2.3.2.4 Flexibilisation Measures 25
   2.4 Conclusions and Recommendations 26
CONTENTS

4.8.1 Main Conclusions in Relation to the Structure, Practice and Contents of Turkish Social Dialogue 66
4.8.2 Improving the Framework for Turkish Social Dialogue 69
4.8.3 Specific Suggestions for Improvement 70
Appendix 1: Main results questionnaire Turkish social dialogue 2005 76
Appendix 2. Figures on members of the worker unions 80

5. The Implementation of Flexible Work Provisions in the Labour Act 81
Frank Hendrickx and Karin Sengers

5.1 Introduction 81
5.2 Overview of the EU Instruments on Atypical Work 82
5.3 Fixed-Term Employment Contracts 83
  5.3.1 Council Directive 1999/70/EC 83
  5.3.2 Regulation of Fixed Term Employment in the Netherlands and Belgium 85
5.4 A Comparison of the Turkish Provisions on Flexible Contracts with the Acquis 87
  5.4.1 The Rules Concerning Contracts for a Definite Period 87
    5.4.1.1 Making a Contract for a Definite Period 87
    5.4.1.2 Measures to Prevent Abuse 89
    5.4.1.3 The Principle of Non-Discrimination 90
    5.4.1.4 Information, Employment and Training Opportunities and Consultation 90
    5.4.1.5 Conclusions 91
  5.4.2 Part-Time Work 92
    5.4.2.1 General 92
    5.4.2.2 The Scope of the Rules and the Definition of Part-Time Work 93
    5.4.2.3 The Non-discrimination Clause 94
    5.4.2.4 Information Procedures 97
    5.4.2.5 Conclusions 97
  5.4.3 On-Call Work 98
  5.4.4 Temporary Employment Contracts 99
    5.4.4.1 Characteristics of Agencies for Temporary Work in EU Member States 99
    5.4.4.2 The Turkish Rules 101
5.5 Health and Safety for Temporary Workers 104
  5.5.1 Introduction 104
  5.5.2 A Comparison of Turkish Law with the Health and Safety Directive 104
    5.5.2.1 The Non-discrimination Provision of Article 2 104
    5.5.2.2 The Information Clause 105
CONTENTS

5.5.2.3 The Provision on Training 107
5.5.2.4 The Use of Workers Services and Medical Surveillance 108
5.5.2.5 The Provision on Protection and Prevention Services 108
5.5.2.6 The Responsibility for Temporary Employment Relationships 109
5.5.2.7 Concluding Remarks 110

5.6 The Rules Concerning Working Time 110
5.6.1 The Scope of the Directive 111
5.6.2 Definition of Working Time 112
5.6.3 The Rest Period Requirements 113
5.6.4 The Provision on the Maximum Weekly Working Time 114
5.6.5 Annual Leave 115
5.6.6 Night Work 116
5.6.7 Preliminary Conclusions on the Implementation of the Directive 117

5.7 Conclusions 118

6. The Relationship between Social Security and Flexibility 119

Frans Pennings, Nurhan Süral and Karin Sengers

6.1 Introduction 119
6.2 Relevant EU Rules and Policies 119
6.2.1 Equal Treatment of Men and Women 120
6.2.2 Employment Policy and Modernisation of Social Security Systems 121
6.3 General Overview of the Turkish Social Security System 124
6.3.1 Basic Information 124
6.3.2 The Draft Laws 127
6.3.3 New Measures to Combat Undeclared Work 128
6.4 Coverage by the Social Insurances Act 129
6.4.1 Workers 129
6.4.2 Extension of Coverage to Persons with Work Relationships other than Labour Contracts 132
6.4.3 Dependants 132
6.4.4 Voluntary Insurance 133
6.4.5 Contingencies Covered 134
6.4.6 Insurance Period and Contributory Days 136
6.4.7 Contributions 138
6.5 Social Security Rules Relevant to Flexible Workers 138
6.5.1 Reference Periods 139
6.5.2 On-Call Work 140
6.5.3 Lump-Sum Payments 141
6.5.4 Part-Time Work 142
6.5.5 Temporary Work 145

Martijn van Velzen and Ton Wilthagen

7.1 Introduction
   7.1.1 The Concept of Flexicurity
   7.1.2 The Introduction of Flexibility in Turkey
   7.1.3 A Study of Flexicurity in Selected Countries

7.2 Flexibility, Security and the European Employment Debate

7.3 Modalities for Employment Flexibility and Security
   7.3.1 Levels of Employment Protection
      7.3.1.1 The United States
      7.3.1.2 Denmark

7.4 Temporary Agency Work
   7.4.1 The United States
   7.4.2 The Netherlands

7.5 Part-Time Work
   7.5.1 The Netherlands
   7.5.2 Spain

7.6 Interlude: European Indicators on Flexibility and Security
   7.6.1 A Flexicurity Index
   7.6.2 EES Indicators

7.7 Conclusion and Recommendations

8. Conclusions

Nurhan Şiral and Frans Pennings

8.1 Introduction
8.2 The Issues Surrounding the Flexibility Debate
8.3 The Main Recommendations
8.4 Final Conclusions

Bibliography

Index