

Institutions and Market Economies

The Political Economy of Growth and Development

Edited by

W. R. Garside

palgrave
macmillan

Contents

List of Figures	x
List of Tables	xi
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgments	xiv
Notes on Contributors	xv
1 Introduction: Economic Growth and Development – An Institutional Perspective	1
W. R. Garside
2 Institutions and Economic Development: Economic History and Human Arrangement	14
Barry Supple
2.1 Religion and the rise of capitalism	18
2.2 The British Industrial Revolution	21
2.3 Diffusion	25
2.4 Decline	29
2.5 The development of the Americas: Land versus institutions	34
2.6 Conclusion	37
3 A 'Tiresome Complexity'? Rent-seeking, Devolution and Economic Performance in Northern Ireland, 1945–72	39
Graham Brownlow
3.1 Introduction: Geography, institutions and economic history	39
3.2 Northern Ireland's poor economic performance: Geography or institutions?	41
3.3 Some theoretical perspectives	43
3.4 Causes of rent-seeking: Features of political institutions, 1945–72	45

3.5	Consequences of rent-seeking: The economic record, 1945–72	47
3.6	Institutional stability and the linen lobby: Northern Ireland's political economy, 1945–63	53
3.7	Institutions and economy at the crossroads: Northern Ireland's political economy, 1963–72	56
3.8	Conclusions: Rent-seeking and economic history	58
4	Institutional Capacity and Social Capability: Japan's 'Deviant' Capitalism in the High-growth Period and Beyond	65
	W. R. Garside
4.1	Enter the critics	66
4.2	State versus market: A vacuous debate?	73
4.3	Catch-up and institutional capacity	75
4.4	The distinctiveness of post-war institutionalism	77
4.5	Conclusion	81
5	The Developmental Logic of Financial Liberalization in Taiwan	87
	Elizabeth Thurbon
5.1	Taiwan's distinctive brand of developmentalism and its financial policy implications	89
5.2	The developmental logic of financial liberalization in Taiwan	92
5.3	Liberalization of the domestic banking sector	93
5.4	Liberalization of the stock exchange	97
5.5	Liberalization and the APROC initiative	99
5.6	Liberalization and the WTO	101
5.7	The expansion of development financing	104
5.8	Conclusion	106
6	The Institutional Legacy and the Development of an Australian National Innovation System	112
	Simon Ville
6.1	Introduction	112
6.2	Institutions and economic change	113
6.3	Phases of institutional development in Australia	115

6.4	Institutional change and innovation	130
6.5	Conclusion: Towards a national innovation system	132
7	The Deep Determinants of Long-run Growth and Economic Development	137
	P. Dorian Owen and Clayton R. Weatherston
7.1	Introduction	137
7.2	'Proximate' versus fundamental determinants	138
7.3	Geography versus institutions: An empirical contest	146
7.4	Empirical studies on the deep determinants of income levels	151
7.5	Conclusions	156
8	The Deep Determinants of Health and Education: Institutions versus Geography	167
	Michael Jones, Stephen Knowles, and P. Dorian Owen
8.1	Introduction	167
8.2	Measuring economic development	169
8.3	Institutions and geography as deep determinants of income per capita	172
8.4	Why institutions may affect health and education	173
8.5	An informal examination of the relationship between institutions, geography and development	175
8.6	Formal empirical analysis	179
8.7	Conclusions	181
9	Diseases Dominate	186
	Aaron Batten and Alan Martina
9.1	Introduction	186
9.2	Quasi-controlled experiment generated by History-Plus-Nature	191
9.3	Model to be estimated and its variables	193
9.4	Estimated regression results	201
9.5	Expanding the limited sample size	208
9.6	The influence of Disease and Institutions on different groups of countries	209
9.7	Conclusions	210
	Appendix A Data and sources	212

Appendix B	A truncated table of critical F -statistics to test for weak instruments in linear IV regression (2005)	213
Appendix C	Standard deviation adjustments to the size of the estimates of core coefficients	214
10	When Can the Rabble Redistribute? Democratization and Income Distribution in Low- and Middle-income Countries	222
	Philip Nel
10.1	Introduction	222
10.2	Concepts and evidence	224
10.3	Explaining the effects of democratization	230
10.4	Demand side	232
10.5	Supply side	234
10.6	Test	236
10.7	Conclusions	240
11	Globalization as the Institutionalization of Neoliberalism: Commodification, Financialization, and the Anchorless Economy	250
	Robert H. Wade
11.1	Enclosure, horizontal and vertical	251
11.2	Financialization	259
11.3	The move towards an anchorless economy	264
11.4	Interaction between financial and real economy instabilities	267
11.5	What is to be done?	269
12	The Democratic Peace and Substitutability During International Crises: Institutionalized Democracy and Foreign Policy Choices	278
	Karl DeRouen Jr and Shaun Goldfinch
12.1	Introduction	278
12.2	Substitution in foreign policy	279
12.3	Escalation and policy substitution	284
12.4	Democracy and dispute resolution	284
12.5	Monadic democracy	287
12.6	Research design	290
12.7	Findings	294
12.8	Conclusion	300

13	The Professions as Systems that Support Transactions Involving Knowledge: Their Contribution to Economic Development and their Response to the Growth of Global Markets	305
	Gordon Boyce
13.1	Introduction	305
13.2	Professions and the transmission of knowledge	306
13.3	The professional 'template'	308
13.4	Systemic links	310
13.5	The rise of a distinctive institutional framework	312
13.6	EQUIS and AACSB	316
13.7	Conclusion	319
14	Communicative Transaction Benefits	322
	S. Kesting
14.1	Transaction costs compared to what?	322
14.2	The neoclassical market as model of reference	323
14.3	Olson's critique of the transaction cost approach	324
14.4	Comparing institutional arrangements with distinct path histories	327
14.5	Shared mental models: A linear, unilateral form of interaction	328
14.6	The image as explanation for transaction benefits	330
14.7	The role of democratic participation in the modern welfare state: Virtuous and vicious cumulative circular causation based on public discussions	333
14.8	The original institutional approach	334
14.9	Theory of communicative action: Habermas' discourse ethics	335
14.10	Conclusion	337
	Index	343