Contents

List of tables and charts  viii
Preface  xi
List of abbreviations  xiii
Maps  xvii

1 Introduction  1
  1.1 Perspective  1
  1.2 Theory and Saudi political economy: useful approaches  4
  1.3 The Saudi private sector: dependent or independent?  21
  1.4 Defining the Saudi private sector: a complication  25
  1.5 The structure of the book  27

2 Laying the basis for development, 1962–70  32
  2.1 Introduction  32
  2.2 The economy before 1962  35
  2.3 Governmental revenue and foreign assets, 1962–70  37
  2.4 Planning without a development plan: the Ten-Point
    Programme and development strategies, 1962–70  39
  2.5 The record of achievement in economic and social development  44
  2.6 Growth and structure of the private sector  48
  2.7 The changing pattern of employment  51
  2.8 Conclusion  51

3 Planning for transformation, 1970–85  52
  3.1 Introduction  52
  3.2 Governmental revenues and foreign assets, 1970–85  54
  3.3 Development strategy: overall targets and objectives  57
Contents

3.4 The articulation of development strategy and economic policy  65
3.5 The record of achievement in economic and social development  72
3.6 The contribution and composition of the private-sector economy  83
3.7 The social dynamics of the private sector  88
3.8 The changing pattern of employment  90
3.9 Conclusion  92

4 Constrained development, 1985–2000  94
4.1 Introduction  94
4.2 Governmental revenues and foreign assets, 1985–2000  99
4.3 Development strategy: overall targets and objectives  104
4.4 The articulation of development strategy and economic policy  108
4.5 The record of achievement in economic and social development  116
4.6 The contribution and composition of the private sector  127
4.7 The social dynamics of the private sector  131
4.8 The changing pattern of employment  139
4.9 Conclusion  141

5 Attitudes of the business elite, 1970–2000  143
5.1 Introduction: the role of the private sector as seen by the business elite  143
5.2 Perceptions of the business elite: the relationship with government  144
5.3 Perceptions of the business elite: the strength of the private sector and its ability to meet international competition  153
5.4 Perceptions of the business elite: the business environment  163
5.5 Conclusion  171

6 Planning for reform, 2000–6  173
6.1 Introduction  173
6.2 Governmental revenues and foreign assets, 2000–6  178
6.3 Development strategy: overall targets and objectives  180
6.4 The articulation of development strategy and economic policy  185
6.5 The record of achievement in economic and social development  192
6.6 The contribution and composition of the private sector 195
6.7 The changing pattern of employment 198

7 The record of reform: progress, constraints and requirements 200
7.1 Introduction 200
7.2 Will the legal, financial and institutional structures which are now in place enable the private sector to act as a critical motor of Saudi Arabia's economic growth? 202
7.3 Does the social and physical infrastructure constitute a sound basis for promoting economic expansion? 207
7.4 Is the economy linked into the wider global setting in a manner which will enable it to develop effectively? 210
7.5 Has the government's policy on privatisation proved capable of creating a more competitive and effective economic order? 214
7.6 Does the stock market operate as an effective instrument for raising capital and channelling investments to productive sectors? 217
7.7 Does the labour market provide the calibre and skills needed for successful economic development, at rates of pay which are competitive internationally? 220
7.8 Are the state institutions, and the manner in which they are linked to the private sector, geared to framing coherent development plans and implementing them? 224
7.9 The social dimension and the Saudi developmental state: conclusion 228

Glossary 231
Notes 232
Bibliography 233
Index 248