

MODERN FINANCIAL MACROECONOMICS
Panics, Crashes, and Crises

Todd A. Knoop

Contents

List of Figures	ix
List of Tables	x
List of Case Studies	xi
Preface	xiii
Introduction	1
PART I AN INTRODUCTION TO FINANCE AND MACROECONOMICS	11
1 The Basics of Financial Markets and Financial Institutions	13
Introduction	13
What is Financial Intermediation and Why is It Different from Other Economic Transactions?	14
What is Money?	16
The Importance of Financial Systems in Stimulating Long-Run Growth	17
The Empirical Evidence on Financial Development and Growth	21
The Four Primary Forms of Financial Intermediation	25
Conclusions	33
2 A Brief History of Financial Development	35
Introduction	35
A Brief History of Banking, Financial Markets, and Central Banking	36
Modern Central Banking	40
A Brief History of International Capital Flows	42

Globalization and Financial Development in the 1990s	44
Conclusions	55
PART II MACROECONOMIC THEORY AND THE ROLE OF FINANCE	57
3 Business Cycles and Early Macroeconomic Theories of Finance	59
Introduction	59
Business Cycle Definitions	60
Financial Indicators of Business Cycles	64
The Sunspot Theory	66
Early Monetary Theories	67
The Classical Model	69
The Debt-Deflation Theory	72
Conclusions	74
4 Keynesian, Monetarist, and Neoclassical Theories	75
Introduction	75
Keynes' General Theory	76
Keynesian Economics and the IS–LM Model	82
The Financial Instability Hypothesis	84
The Monetarist Model	86
Principles of the Monetarist model	86
Neoclassical Theories	91
Conclusions	100
5 New Institutional Theories of Finance: Models of Risk and the Costs of Credit Intermediation	102
Introduction	102
What is Meant by “New Institutional” Theories of Finance?	103
The Financial Accelerator Model and the Role of Credit in Business Cycles	106
The Financial Accelerator and Monetary Policy	111
The Empirical Evidence on the Financial Accelerator Model	112
Conclusions	120
6 New Institutional Theories of Finance: Models of Credit Rationing	123
Introduction	123
Two Models of Credit Rationing	125

Equity Rationing	129
Empirical Evidence on Models of Credit Rationing	131
Conclusions	137
PART III FINANCIAL VOLATILITY AND ECONOMIC [IN]STABILITY	139
7 The Role of Financial Systems in Monetary and Stabilization Policy	141
Introduction	141
Why Does Money Matter? Traditional Theories of the Monetary Transmission Mechanism	142
Balance Sheet Channels and the Monetary Transmission Mechanism	145
Empirical Studies of the Balance Sheet Channels of Monetary Transmission	147
Is Monetary Policy Still Powerful? A Look at the Empirical Evidence	148
Old Debates over the Effectiveness of Stabilization Policy	152
New Debates over the Effectiveness of Stabilization Policy	154
Conclusions	161
8 Banking Crises and Asset Bubbles	163
Introduction	163
The Causes and Prevention of Banking Crises	165
Empirical Evidence on Banking Crises	169
The Causes and Prevention of Asset Bubbles	173
Empirical Evidence on Asset Bubbles	178
Conclusions	188
PART IV INTERNATIONAL FINANCE AND FINANCIAL CRISES	191
9 Capital Flight and the Causes of International Financial Crises	193
Introduction	193
The Causes of Capital Flight and Currency Crises	195
Contagion	198
Empirical Evidence on Capital Flows, Currency Crises, and Contagion	200
The Causes and Costs of Twin Crises	202
The Currency and Banking Crises in East Asia	205
Conclusions	213

10 International Financial Crises: Policies and Prevention	215
Introduction	215
The Benefits and Costs of Financial Liberalization	216
Guidelines for Domestic Financial Regulation	219
The Pros and Cons of Capital Controls	222
International Financial Regulation	224
The IMF, Its Policies, and Its Critics	225
Reforming the IMF	233
Conclusions	234
PART V CONCLUSIONS	237
11 What We have Learned, What We Still Need to Learn about Financial Macroeconomics	239
A Brief Review	239
What We Have Learned about Financial Macroeconomics	241
What We Do Not Know	247
Concluding Conclusions	254
Bibliography	255
Index	265