Globalization, Flexibilization and Working Conditions in Asia and the Pacific

EDITED BY SANGHEON LEE AND
FRANÇOIS EYRAUD

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR OFFICE
GENEVA

Chandos Publishing
Oxford - England
Contents

List of figures ix
List of tables xiii
Acknowledgements xix
Introduction by F. Eyraud and S. Lee xxi
About the contributors xxix

PART 1: LABOUR MARKET CHANGES, WORKERS' VOICE AND LABOUR REGULATION

1 Globalization, institutional reforms and workers: changes and outcomes 3
   S. Lee and F. Eyraud

   Introduction 3
   Recent developments in the labour market: economic and employment trends 5
   Flexibilization and diversity of employment patterns 10
   Wages and incomes: divisive growth 21
   Diversifying hours of work: long hours and underemployment 28
   Non-standard jobs, employment quality, workers' choice 30
   Globalization, deregulation and alternative policy options 36
   Conclusions 45

2 Trade union rights and trade competitiveness: Asia in a global context 47
   D. Kucera

   The debate 47
   Developments in trade union rights, wages and export-market shares 52
   Recent findings 72
   What does it mean? 78
3 The regulation of working conditions in Asia and the Pacific: flexibility, fragmentation and workers’ rights 81

D. McCann

Introduction 81

Globalization and the regulation of working conditions 83

Flexibility and deregulation: a persistent debate 86

Deregulatory discourses and working conditions laws in Asia and the Pacific 90

Fragmentation and the indirect deregulation of working conditions 97

Legal responses to fragmentation 101

The impact of labour law in Asia and the Pacific 107

Conclusion: advancing working conditions in Asia and the Pacific – some questions and suggestions 110

PART 2: FLEXIBILIZATION AND NON-STANDARD EMPLOYMENT

4 Australia: institutional changes and workforce fragmentation 115

I. Campbell

Introduction 115

Globalization and labour market reforms in Australia 116

Changes in employment conditions for individual workers 124

New issues and social debates 148

Conclusions 151

Acknowledgements 152

5 Japan: the resilience of employment relationships and the changing conditions of work 153

K. Kubo

Introduction: has the style of employment relationships changed in Japan? 153

The effects of globalization and restructuring on labour 155

Long-term employment relationship 160

Increase in the number of non-regular workers 166

Seniority-based pay system 172
Contents

Social debate: widening economic inequality and remedies 181
Concluding remarks 183

6 The Republic of Korea: from flexibility to segmentation 187
   B.-H. Lee and B.-S. Yoo
   Introduction 187
   Labour market reforms and social dialogue 188
   Changes in employment conditions: segmentation in the labour market 200
   Conclusion 232

PART 3: ECONOMIC PRESSURES AND THE CHANGING QUALITY OF WORK

7 Indonesia: the search for alternatives 237
   D. Widarti
   Introduction 237
   Globalization and labour market reforms 238
   Labour market trends 245
   Changes in employment conditions in Indonesia 250
   Social debates and new policy measures 271
   Conclusions and prospects 276

8 The Philippines: changes at the workplace 279
   J.V. Sibal, M.S.V. Amante and C. Tolentino
   Introduction 279
   Globalization and Philippine labour and economy 280
   Changes in the workplace: survey results 292
   Changes in management strategies and their impacts on workers: case studies 298
   Policy developments and prospects 306
   Appendix: the employer and the worker survey 309

9 Thailand: globalization and unprotected workers 313
   S. Siengthai
   Introduction 313