Towards a Division of Labour in European Development Co-operation: Case Studies

Maja Bucar
Maria João Marques
Anja Mesic
Eva Plibersek

Bonn 2007
Development policies of New Member States and their participation in European Union development co-operation

Maja Bucar / Eva Plibersek / Anja Mesic
12 Czech Republic

12.1 Overview of Czech Republic development co-operation
12.2 Political and legal framework
12.3 Institutional framework
12.4 Objectives and priorities
12.5 Statistics

13 Main findings, preliminary conclusions and recommendations

The possible role of a smaller donor: The case of Portugal

Maria João Marques

1 Overview of main features of Portuguese development assistance

1.1 Volume and trend
1.2 Channels and allocation
1.3 Organization of the Portuguese aid system

2 Features of Portuguese development assistance that make it well prepared for a more effective division of labour in European development co-operation

3 Critical points in assessments of Portugal's development assistance relevant under the aspect of division of labour

4 Conclusion: Steps to be taken in order to make Portugal's aid fit for a division on labour within European development assistance

Annex