Quantitative Economic History
The good of counting

Edited by Joshua L. Rosenbloom
Contents

List of figures ix
List of tables x
List of contributors xii
Preface xv
Acknowledgements xviii

1 Editor's introduction: the good of counting 1
   Joshua L. Rosenbloom

2 An economic history of bastardy in England and Wales 8
   John Ermisch

3 Epidemics, demonstration effects, and investment in sanitation capital by U.S. cities in the early twentieth century 34
   Louis Cain and Elyce Rotella

4 Profitability, firm size, and business organization in nineteenth-century U.S. manufacturing 54
   Jeremy Atack and Fred Bateman

5 Railroads and local economic development: the United States in the 1850s 78
   Michael R. Haines and Robert A. Margo

6 Did refrigeration kill the hog–corn cycle? 100
   Lee A. Craig and Matthew T. Holt

7 Measuring the intensity of state labor regulation during the Progressive Era 119
   Rebecca Holmes, Price Fishback and Samuel Allen