Contents

Figures ................................................................. vii
Tables ...................................................................... viii
Contributors .......................................................... x
Acknowledgements ................................................... xiii
Abbreviations .......................................................... xv

1. Introduction and overview ........................................ 1
   W. Bradnee Chambers and Gary P. Sampson

Part I. Market access ................................................... 17

2. Why developing countries need agricultural policy reform to succeed under Doha ................................. 19
   Kym Anderson and Will Martin

3. The cotton initiative .................................................. 41
   Magda Shahin

4. The WTO non-agricultural market access negotiations:
   Opportunities and challenges for developing countries ....... 62
   Sam Laird
5. Trade in services and policy priorities for developing countries ........................................ 86
   Gary P. Sampson

Part II. Legal flexibility ........................................ 107

   6. Special and differential treatment: The need for a different approach ................................ 109
      Constantine Michalopoulos

   7. Special and differential treatment for developing countries in the World Trade Organization ........................................ 130
      Manickan Supperamaniam

Part III. Facing challenges ........................................ 139

   8. Making TRIPS work for developing countries ........................................ 141
      Graham Dutfield

      Ernst-Ulrich Petersmann

10. A human rights approach to “sustainable development” within the World Trade Organization ........................................ 192
    Jens Pössel

11. Asymmetric integration: The role of regionalism ........................................ 229
    Ken Heydon

Part IV. Process ........................................ 253

12. Developing countries and the reform of the WTO Dispute Settlement System: Expectations and realities ........................................ 255
    George Akpan

13. WTO negotiations on trade facilitation – Lessons for the future? New perspectives for and from the developing world ........................................ 280
    Nora Neufeld

Index ........................................ 311