Money Matters

Economics and the German Cultural Imagination,
1770–1850

Richard T. Gray

UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON PRESS
Seattle & London
Contents

Introduction 3

Part One: Economics and Intellectual Culture

Chapter 1 / Buying into Signs: Money and Semiosis in Eighteenth-Century German Language Theory 23

Exchanging Words for Money and Money for Words 23 / Ambivalent Economics in Eighteenth-Century German Theories of Language 32 / Economics and the Paradigm Shift in Linguistic Theory 45

Chapter 2 / Hypersign, Hypermoney, Hypermarket: Adam Müller's Theory of Money and Romantic Semiotics 48

Thoroughly Contrary Müller 48 / Fiduciary Money and the Hypermarket of Incessant Circulation 52 / The Differential Nature of Monetary Signs and Economic Values 59 / Müller’s Economic Theory and Romantic Semiotics 63 / Economics and the Poetic Imagination 72

Chapter 3 / Economic Romanticism: Monetary Nationalism in Johann Gottlieb Fichte and Adam Müller 79

German Economic Nationalism 79 / Monetary Nationhood in Fichte’s Der geschlossene Handelsstaat 83 / Monetary Nationalism and German Transcendental Idealism 96 / Adam Müller, “Credit,” and the Monetarized Nation 99
Chapter 4 / Economics and the Imagination: Cultural Values and the Debate over Physiocracy in Germany, 1770–1789 109

PART TWO: LITERARY ECONOMIES

Chapter 5 / Counting on God: Economic Providentialism in Johann Heinrich Jung-Stilling's Lebensgeschichte 173

Schlemihl's Shadow: Inflation, Excess, Scarcity 230 / Peter Schlemihl and the Economics of Excess 244 / “So lernt ich traurig den verzicht...”: Peter Schlemihl and the Ethos of Temperance 254 / Peter Schlemihl as Critique of a Poetics of Excess 269
Chapter 7 / Red Herrings and Blue Smocks: Commercialism, Ecological Destruction, and Anti-Semitism in Annette von Droste-Hülshoff’s Die Judenbuche 275

Structural and Narrative Dichotomies in Die Judenbuche 275 / Wood Poaching and the Nineteenth-Century Discourse on Private Property 279 / The Economic Subtext of Die Judenbuche 291 / The Ethnological Displacement of Economic Self-Critique 308

Chapter 8 / The (Mis)Fortune of Commerce: Economic Transformation in Adalbert Stifter’s Bergkristall 314

The Ideological Veneer of Stifter’s Bucolic Idylls 314 / Possessive Individualism: Sebastian the Shoemaker as Representative of Capitalist Innovation 322 / Revising Historical Narratives: From the Misfortune to the Fortune of Commerce 334

Conclusion / Limitless Faith in the Limitless: Money, Modernity, and the Economics/Aesthetics of Mediation in Goethe’s Faust II 346

Endless Striving and the Mechanisms of the Modern Economy 346 / An Economics of Redemption? 356 / “Pleasant Landscape” and the Economics/Aesthetics of Mediation 363 / Hey Big Spender! The Aesthetics and Hermeneutics of Excess in Faust II 384

Notes 401
Bibliography 429
Index 455