Market-Led Strategic Change
Transforming the Process of Going to Market

Fourth edition

Nigel F. Piercy
Professor of Marketing and Strategic Management
Warwick Business School
The University of Warwick
Contents

Preface to the fourth edition ix
Acknowledgements xiii
About the author xv
What readers said about market-led strategic change xvii

PART I THE IMPACT OF CUSTOMER VALUE IMPERATIVES 1
Chapter 1 New marketing: marketing is dead, long live marketing! 3
Chapter 2 The customer is always right-handed: customer satisfaction, customer sophistication and market granularity 31
Chapter 3 New marketing meets old marketing: new marketing wins! 81
Chapter 4 Value-based marketing strategy 109
End-of-part cases 147
Case 1 Tata, But Definitely Not Goodbye 147
Case 2 Strangling the Fat Lady at EMI? 155
Case 3 The Clouds Raining on the Computer Business 162

PART II DEVELOPING A VALUE-BASED MARKETING STRATEGY 169
Chapter 5 Strategic thinking and thinking strategically 171
Chapter 6 Market sensing and learning strategy: competitive strength through knowing more 219
Chapter 7 Strategic market choices and targets: where to compete and where not to 267
Chapter 8 Customer value strategy and positioning: what have you got to offer, how does it make you different to the rest? 309
Chapter 9 Strategic relationships and networks: building the infrastructure to deliver the strategy 343
End-of-part cases 377
Case 4 Big Blue Gets Transparent 377
Case 5 Oh, the Tangled Web They Weave at BAA 388
Case 6 The Wild, Wild Rover 402
PART III  PROCESSES FOR MANAGING STRATEGIC TRANSFORMATION  413

Chapter 10  Strategic gaps: the difference between what we want and what we have got  415
Chapter 11  Organization and processes for change: building the infrastructure to make it happen  431
Chapter 12  Implementation process and internal marketing: making it happen  467

End-of-part cases  517
Case 7  Tesco – Fresh & Queasy in the USA  517
Case 8  When the Peddle Hits the Mittal  526
Case 9  One-Laptop-Per-Child Stirs Up the Grown-Ups  532

Index  539