Detailed Contents

Preface xiii
Table of Cases xv
Table of Legislation xvii

One Setting the Scene 1
I. The Separation of Ownership and Control as a Source of Concern 1
II. The Relevant Historical Literature 3
III. Ownership, Control and Corporate Governance in a Comparative Context 4
IV. Explaining Why Ownership Separated from Control: The Questions to Ask 8
V. Empirical Data 11
VI. Chronological Overview/Plan of the Book 17
VII. Caveats 20
VIII. Key Insights 23

Two The Determinants of Ownership and Control: Current Theories 26
I. Separating Ownership from Control: Economic Implications 26
II. Company Law 29
A. Allocation of Managerial and Voting Control 30
B. Company Law as a Determinant of Ownership Structure 33
III. Trust 41
IV. Regulation of Financial Institutions 44
V. Politics 46
VI. Legal Origins 51
VII. Path Dependence/"History Matters" 55

Three The ‘Sell Side’ 59
I. Lack of Blockholding on Formation 59
II. The Benefits of Blockholding 61
III. Diversification and Liquidity 64
IV. Generational Issues 65
Detailed Contents

V. Erosion of Profits 67
VI. Unwinding Ownership Blocks to Finance Mergers/Expansion 71
VII. Generous Terms on Offer 73
VIII. ‘Self-Regulation’ in Financial Markets 74
IX. Dividends 77
X. Politics 80

Four The ‘Buy Side’ 86
I. Who Bought Shares? 86
II. Deterrents to Investment in Shares 94
   A. In General 94
   B. Britain’s Economic Decline 98
III. Factors Underpinning Demand for Shares 103
   A. Capital Available for Investment 103
   B. The Benefits of a Good Business Reputation 104
   C. Stock Exchange Regulation 106
   D. Dividends 108
   E. Investment Alternatives 115
   F. Investor Sentiment 119
   G. Mergers 122
IV. Deterrents to Intervention 123
   A. General Considerations 123
   B. Private Investors 126

Five Up to 1880 133
I. The 1690s: The First Wave of Company Promotions 133
II. The South Sea Company and the 1719–1720 Bubble 137
III. The Publicly Traded Company, 1721–1844 141
   A. Promising Foundations 141
   B. Types of Companies Traded on the Stock Market 142
   C. Ownership and Control 144
IV. Why Didn’t the Industrial Revolution Act as a Catalyst for Publicly Held Industrial Companies? 147
   A. Law 147
   B. Market Dynamics 152
V. The mid-1840s–1880 157
   A. Railways 157
      1. Ownership and Control 157
      2. Railway ‘Mania’ 160
B. Company Law and the Organization of Industrial/Manufacturing Enterprise 164
   1. Legal Reforms 164
   2. Incorporation Activity 166
   3. Sell Side 170
   4. Buy Side 171

Six 1880–1914 175
I. Development of the UK’s Corporate Economy 176
II. The Sell Side 181
   A. Companies Launched from Scratch 181
   B. Reasons for Exit—at Least Partially 183
      1. Individualism in Decline/Diversification 183
      2. Dividends 184
      3. The Price Was Right 186
      4. Raising Capital 187
III. The Buy Side 189
   A. Who Bought Shares? 189
      1. Institutional Investors 189
      2. Personal Investors 191
   B. Deterrents to Investing in Shares 192
      1. The Overseas Option 192
      2. Company Law 194
      3. Stock Exchange Regulation 196
      4. Financial Intermediaries 197
      5. The Press 200
   C. Factors Promoting Investment in Shares 203
      1. Returns in Comparison with Other Investments 203
      2. Means Available for Assessing Public Offerings 207
      3. Dividends 212
      4. Market Sentiment 213

Seven The Separation of Ownership and Control by 1914 221
I. The Received Wisdom on Ownership and Control 221
II. Hannah’s Challenge 225
III. The ‘Two-Thirds’ Rule 225
IV. Railways 230
V. Banking 231
VI. Insurance 238
VII. Shipping 240
VIII. Electric Utilities 241
IX. Industrial Companies 242
Detailed Contents

Eight 1914–1939

I. The Sell Side
   A. Companies Distributing Shares to the Public
   B. Diversification
   C. Company Law
   D. Dividends
   E. Erosion of Corporate Profits by Taxation, Recession and Competition
   F. Other Taxes
   G. Generational Considerations
   H. Favourable Exit Terms
   I. Financing Mergers and the Growth of the Company

II. The Buy Side
   A. Who Was Buying Shares?
      1. Institutional Investors
      2. Individual Investors
   B. Factors Influencing the Decision to Buy Shares
      1. The Overseas Option
      2. Company Law
      3. Stock Exchange Regulation
      4. Market Oriented 'Quality Control'
      5. Financial Press
      6. Returns in Comparison with Other Investments
      7. Dividends
      8. Market Sentiment

III. The Pattern of Ownership and Control
   A. Outside Investors and Control
   B. Evidence on Share Ownership Patterns

Nine 1940–1990: The Sell Side

I. Reduced Variation in the Share Market
II. Tracking the Unwinding of Control
   A. Data
   B. Paths to Dispersed Ownership: The Importance of Merger Activity
III. Incentives to Exit
   A. Market Forces
   B. Taxation
   C. Company Law
   D. Stock Exchange Regulation
   E. Takeover Regulation
Detailed Contents

Ten 1940–1990: The Buy Side 337

I. Factors Discouraging Investment in Shares 337
   A. Britain's Economic Decline 337
   B. Managerial Quality 338
   C. The Status of Shareholders 340
   D. Tax 341
   E. Private Investor Exit 343

II. The Rise of Institutional Share Ownership 344

III. Tax and the Institutional 'Wall of Money' 346

IV. Factors Inducing Institutional Investors to Buy Shares 350
   A. Asset Allocation by Insurance Companies and Pension Funds 350
   B. Trapped Capital 352
   C. Shares versus Other Domestic Options 353
   D. Company Law and Stock Exchange Regulation 356
   E. Takeovers 360
      1. Advantages for Institutional Shareholders 360
      2. Defensive Tactics 367

V. Institutional Shareholder Passivity 370
   A. The Potential for Intervention 370
   B. Reluctance to Step Forward 373
   C. Explanations 377

Eleven Epilogue: Challenges to the UK System of Ownership and Control 382

I. Increased Activism by ‘Mainstream’ Institutional Investors 382
II. ‘Offensive’ Shareholder Activism 392
III. Private Equity 397
IV. Why Recent Trends Will Reinforce the Separation of Ownership and Control 401

Index A General 405
Index B Companies and Other Business Enterprises Referred to in the Text 416
Index C Index of People (Other than Authors) Referred to in the Text 420
Index D Authors, Journals cited in the Text 422