Finance: Servant or Deceiver?

Financialization at the Crossroads

Paul H. Dembinski

Translated from French by Kevin Cook
Contents

List of Figures and Boxes viii

Foreword x

Introduction 1
Background 1
Good timing 2
Theoretical background 3
How financialization is changing society 5
Structure of the report 7

Part I The Financial Iceberg 11

Chapter 1.1 The Historical Development of Finance 13
The euphoric years 13
Money: from servant to master 18
ICT euphoria 23
The break-up of money 27

Chapter 1.2 Players and Institutions 33
Markets as trust-building mechanisms 33
Mega-players 41
Custodians of the market temple 48
Public deficits and how they are financed 50

Chapter 1.3 The Financial World View 54
The efficiency ethos 55
Risk and return: a neat paradigm 58
Risk – fear of risk – a risk-free future 62
From interest to greed: unbridled passion 63

Part II A New Pattern 73

Chapter 2.1 Financing Relationships and Financial Transactions 74
Financing relationships 74
From financing relationships to financial transactions 78
Financial transactions 80
Chapter 2.2 The Spread of Transactions
The institutional process
Financial markets as sounding boards
Finance as intermediary
Relationships and transactions: statistical orders of magnitude
Finance and the rest of the economy

Chapter 2.3 Very Large Corporations: The Vehicles of Financialization
Very large corporations (VLCs)
A global marketing economy
Enterprises' value: new forms of capital
Shareholder value: the mantra of the new foremen
ROE rules
Procedures as a vehicle for efficiency

Chapter 2.4 Financialization of the Economic Fabric
VLCs' subcontractors
SMEs: private equity on the prowl

Chapter 2.5 Tying Customers to Enterprises
Planned obsolescence
'Personalized' customer relations
Dissolving products into services
The alienation of the anaesthetized consumer

Chapter 2.6 Other Aspects of Financialization
The age of anticipation: banks and their customers
Humanity in the grip of financialization
Finance: a metaphysical response

Chapter 2.7 Implications of the New Pattern

Part III Finance - What Kind of Society Do We Want?
Chapter 3.1 Limits Inherent in the Process Itself
The spectre of sterility
Complexity
Concentration of economic power

Chapter 3.2 Limits Inherent in Human Nature
Transactions: beyond conflicts of interest
Ethical alienation
A sense of helplessness