Since 1922, Harvard Business Review has been a leading source of breakthrough ideas in management practice. The Harvard Business Review Classics series now offers you the opportunity to make these seminal pieces a part of your permanent management library. Each highly readable volume contains a groundbreaking idea that continues to shape best practices and inspire countless managers around the world.

When entering a developing market, it can be hard to resist the easy wins of incremental growth. Unfortunately, merely "skimming the surface" can leave more valuable opportunities on the table.

In The End of Corporate Imperialism, renowned management scholars C. K. Prahalad and Kenneth Lieberthal show that companies who build a deep understanding of local markets generate far larger—and more lasting—returns in their global investments. With this local learning in hand, you’ll be better able to adapt your company’s offerings and more fully tap each market’s true potential.
