ESSAYS ON EMPLOYEE STOCK OPTIONS

by

Ge Zhang

Department of Business Administration
Duke University

Date: 4/18/03

Approved:

John R. Graham, Supervisor

David Borch

Albert S. Kyle

Hui Ou-Yang

Stephen Wallenstein

Dissertation submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in the Department of Business Administration in the Graduate School of Duke University

2003
1.6.1 Integration results for normal distribution .......... 32
1.6.2 Optimization with predetermined option strike price .... 33
1.6.3 Optimization with endogenous option strike price ....... 34

2 Market Valuation and Employee Stock Options .......... 53

2.1 Introduction .......................................... 53
2.2 Hypothesis development ................................ 57
  2.2.1 Market valuation rationale for ESOs ............... 57
  2.2.2 Testable hypotheses .............................. 59
2.3 Data .................................................. 65
  2.3.1 Option grant ..................................... 65
  2.3.2 Value-price ratio .................................. 67
  2.3.3 Financial constraints measure ...................... 69
  2.3.4 Other control variables ........................... 70
  2.3.5 The choice to grant options ....................... 71
2.4 Empirical results ...................................... 71
  2.4.1 General results .................................... 71
  2.4.2 Other market valuation measures .................... 73
  2.4.3 The choice to grant options ....................... 75
  2.4.4 Percentage of options granted to executives ........ 76
  2.4.5 Financial constraints on the valuation effect ...... 77
  2.4.6 Extreme overvaluation on the valuation effect ...... 78
  2.4.7 Differentiating from competing hypotheses ........... 79
  2.4.8 Individual components of the KZ index ............. 80
  2.4.9 Robustness ....................................... 80