Contents

List of illustrations xiv
Preface xvi
List of abbreviations xix

Introduction 1

Questions addressed 2
Some central tenets 3

PART I
Development policy issues 5

1 What does participation of the poor in development mean? 7

Introduction 7
Development thinking change 7
Different perceptions of participatory development 8
Influencing policy-making through the poor’s own organizations 10
Enabling rural women to participate 11
Concluding remarks 12
References 13

2 Are the neglect of agriculture and land concentration responsible for increasing poverty and slow economic growth in developing countries? 15

Introduction 15
The adequacy of investment in agriculture 15
Agricultural labour productivity 16
Falling food productivity and poverty 21
Increasing land concentration and landlessness 25
Concluding remarks 29
References 29
Contents

3 The distortion of rural development issues
   The problem and the context 31
   The distortion and its policy consequences 33
   The post-1980 distortion 37
   Concluding remarks 38
   References 39

4 The economics of agricultural land fragmentation
   The contributing factors 41
   Economic consequences 45
   Measures to tackle fragmentation consequences 46
   Concluding remarks 48
   References 49

5 The impact of multinationals on land tenure and agricultural labour in developing countries
   Introduction: the controversy 50
   The nature of the multinationals' influence 50
   Analytical questions to address 52
   Country experiences: impact on access to land, income disparities and employment 53
   Concluding remarks 59
   References 60

6 Peasants' command over their food needs is a justification for land reform
   Introduction 61
   Some general propositions 61
   Command over food defined 62
   The realities of landlessness, malnutrition and poverty in rural areas 65
   The scope of land redistribution as a determinant of the landless' benefits 67
   Concluding remarks 68
   References 68

7 The rationale for anti-poverty land reform
   Introduction 69
   The economic rationale for land reform 69
   Why the present declining concern for land reform? 73
   What now? A challenge 75
   References 76
Agrarian reform and rural development: lessons learnt and prospects 78

Introduction: agrarian reform linkage with rural development 78
A-brief review of past experience 79
The golden age of agrarian reform 1950-70 82
The twist and relapse 86
Concluding remarks 88
References 91

PART II
Country- and region-specific essays 95

The role of the land tenure institution in the social structure of pre-land reform Egypt 97

Introduction 97
The bases and measures of stratification 97
Objective criteria for suggested stratification of rural people in Egypt 98
The subjective criteria for stratification 105
Concluding remarks 107
References 108

The labour and capital markets in mid-twentieth-century Egyptian agriculture 109

The labour market 109
The capital market 118
Capital–labour substitution 121
References 122

Land property rights and their diverse adjustments in Latin America during the 1950s 124

Introduction 124
Land settlement policy in Ecuador and Paraguay 125
Redistributive land reforms in Bolivia and Cuba 126
Concluding remarks 127
References 130

The development of tribal lands and transformation of nomadism to settled farming in Libya 131

Introduction 131
Directing oil revenues for the development of tribal lands 132
Redistribution of land property rights 132
Contents

Effects on agricultural production and the labour market 134
Concluding remarks 135
References 136

13 The contribution of reforming the land-tenure system to food security and economic development in the Middle East 137

Introduction 137
The road to economic development: land reform movement 139
Policy effects on income distribution and capital formation 142
Factors in management and productivity 144
Concluding remarks 147
References 147

14 Land reform in Egypt and the Philippines: similarities, differences and challenges 149

Introduction 149
The similarities between the Egyptian and Filipino reforms 150
Important differences 153
Concluding remarks 154
References 155

15 The roles of the state and market in land property transfer: lessons from Egypt regarding the Soviet Union's agrarian 'glasnost' 157

Introduction 157
Conceptual framework: the roles of the state and market in land tenure 158
The Egyptian experience: lessons learnt regarding the intended adjustments in the Soviet Union's agrarian system 160
Emerging issues relevant to present concerns of the Soviet Union 166
References 167

16 Land reform and rural development in North Africa 169

Introduction 169
The meaning of rural development and policy choice 169
Redistribution of land ownership 172
Agricultural growth: who benefits? 172
The relationship between agricultural growth, land concentration and rural poverty levels 177
Human resources development 180
17 The prospects for rural development in Africa 184

Introduction 184
Real concerns 184
What happened to Africa: causes and challenges 186
The task ahead 193
References 196

Notes 197
Bibliography 210
Indexes 218