Creative Labour
Working in the Creative Industries

Edited by
Alan McKinlay &
Chris Smith
Contents

List of Tables vii
Notes on Contributors viii

Part I  Theory and Overview 1

1  Creative Industries and Labour Process Analysis 3
   Chris Smith and Alan McKinlay

2  Creative Labour: Content, Contract, and Control 29
   Chris Smith and Alan McKinlay

3  From Conception to Consumption: Creativity and the Missing Managerial Link 51
   Paul Thompson, Mike Jones and Chris Warhurst

4  Working in the Creative Economy: Risk, Adaptation, and the Persistence of Exclusionary Networks 72
   Susan Christopherson

Part II  Creative Labour in Practice: Film, Theatre and Television 91

5  Getting In and Getting On in Hollywood: Freelance Careers in an Uncertain Industry 93
   Keith Randle and Nigel Culkin
6 Active Networking: Action, Social Structure and the Process of Networking
   Helen Blair

7 ‘I Don’t Know Where You Learn Them’: Skills in Film and TV
   Irena Grugulis and Dimitrinka Stoyanova

8 Bringing Creativity to Market: Actors as Self-Employed Employees
   Axel Haunschild and Doris Ruth Eikhof

   Alan McKinlay

Part III New Media

10 Situating the Production of New Media: The Case of San Francisco (1995–2000)
   Andy C. Pratt

11 Beyond the Hype: Working in the German Internet Industry
   Nicole Mayer-Ahuja and Harald Wolf

12 The Organisation of Creativity: Content, Contracts and Control in Swedish Interactive Media Production
   Fredrik Movitz and Åke Sandberg

Author Index
Subject Index