A World without Agriculture
The Structural Transformation in Historical Perspective

C. Peter Timmer
Contents

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS vii

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS ix

1. THE STRUCTURAL TRANSFORMATION IN HISTORICAL PERSPECTIVE 1
   The Historical Perspective 3
   The Structural Transformation 5
   The Structural Transformation as a General Equilibrium Process 7

2. COMMON PATTERNS AND DIVERGENT POLICIES, 1965–2000 13
   The Basic Patterns 14
   Changes over Time 22
      The Short Run 22
      Long-Run Patterns, 1820–1965 24
   Divergent Paths 25
      Country Effects 26
      The Contrast between Asia and the Rest of the World 27
   Policy Responses 30
      Understanding the Formation of the Agricultural Terms of Trade 30
      How the Asian Experience Differs in Agricultural Price Policy 34

3. THE PARADOXICAL ROLE OF AGRICULTURE IN THE STRUCTURAL TRANSFORMATION 37
   The Role of Agriculture in Economic Development 38
Direct Contribution to Economic Growth via Lewis Linkages 40
Indirect Contributions to Economic Growth via Johnston-Mellor Linkages 41
Contributions from Agriculture to Economic Growth That Are Hard to Measure 42
Linking Agriculture to Poverty Reduction 44
From Agricultural to Rural Development 47

4. Is Agricultural Development More Difficult Now?
New Challenges and New Opportunities 49
"New" Initial Conditions 51
Opposition and Higher Protectionist Barriers from Rich Countries 52
Stagnant Technology and Much More Complicated Technical Problems 54
Distracted Donors and Development Fads 55
High Energy Prices and Biofuels as a "Game-Changer" for Agriculture 57

5. Concluding Observations 61
Notes 65
References 73
About the Author 83