Labour law and worker protection in developing countries

Edited by Tzehaines Teklè
Contents

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Section</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Acknowledgements</td>
<td>ix</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>List of contributors</td>
<td>xi</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Table of international instruments</td>
<td>xiii</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Table of domestic legislation</td>
<td>xix</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Table of cases</td>
<td>xix</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>List of abbreviations</td>
<td>xxxii</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Introduction

1. Labour law and worker protection in the South:
   An evolving tension between models and reality

Tzehaiñesh Teklê 3

1.1 Strengthening the presence of southern perspectives in the current debates on labour law 3

1.2 An analytical approach to studying the impact of labour law in the South 9

1.3 The structure of the book 11

1.4 The challenge of the mismatch between socio-legal categories and reality 12

1.4.1 The structural features of the world of work and labour law 12

1.4.2 A world of work in evolution 20

1.5 The problem of enforcement: Structural and new dimensions 32
Labour law and worker protection in developing countries

1.6 Labour law and gender equality .................................................. 36
  1.6.1 The gendered construction of the law .................................. 36
  1.6.2 Labour law and the promotion of gender equality at work .... 37
  1.6.3 The interaction of labour law with other branches of law and non-state sources of law ............................. 39
  1.6.4 The impact of globalization ................................................. 40

1.7 Conclusions ................................................................. 42

PART I Worker access to labour law protection: Historical challenges and the impact of globalization

2. The effectiveness of labour law and decent work aspirations in the developing countries: A framework for analysis
  Rachid Filali Meknassi .......................................................... 51
  2.1 Introduction ........................................................................ 51
  2.2 The ineffectiveness of labour law as an expression of socio-legal pluralism ................................................. 55
     2.2.1 One labour law, many labour law systems ....................... 56
     2.2.2 Inadequate integration into the dominant trade networks: The main source of legal ineffectiveness in the southern countries ................................................ 63
  2.3 The ineffectiveness of labour law: A symptom of the decent work deficit .......................................................... 69
     2.3.1 The ineffectiveness of workers' rights and poor overall effectiveness of law ........................................... 70
     2.3.2 A fair globalization: A factor in promoting decent work and effective rights ........................................... 84

3. Trade liberalization, labour law and development: A contextualization
  Adelle Blackett ................................................................. 93
  3.1 Introduction ....................................................................... 93
  3.2 The foundations of multilateral trade: Embedded liberalism and the convenience of colonialism ..................... 94
  3.3 The inherent tension between trade liberalization, labour law and the role of the contemporary state in post-colonial developing economies .................................................. 97
PART II Labour law and worker protection in the South: Regional perspectives

4. Labour law in Latin America: The gap between norms and reality
Graciela Bensusán ........................................ 135

4.1 Introduction ........................................ 135

4.2 The evolution of labour law and the economic and political context ........................................ 137

4.3 Worker protection under labour law: Old and new problems ........................................ 142
  4.3.1 The limited scope of labour law ........................................ 142
  4.3.2 Recent responses to changing forms of work ........................................ 146
  4.3.3 Problems relating to enforcement mechanisms ........................................ 147

4.4 Gender equality: The case of Mexico ........................................ 161
  4.4.1 The legal framework and the situation of women workers in the labour market ........................................ 162
  4.4.2 The situation in the export-oriented maquila garment industry ........................................ 166

4.5 Conclusions ........................................ 170

5. Labour law: A southern African perspective
Colin Fenwick, Evance Kalula and Ingrid Landau ........................................ 175

5.1 Introduction ........................................ 175

5.2 The evolution of labour law in southern Africa ........................................ 177
  5.2.1 Colonization ........................................ 177
  5.2.2 Post-independence ........................................ 178
  5.2.3 Economic liberalization ........................................ 180
  5.2.4 Democratization ........................................ 181