Consumerism and the Co-operative movement in modern British history

Taking stock

edited by
Lawrence Black and Nicole Robertson

Manchester University Press
Manchester and New York

distributed in the United States exclusively by Palgrave Macmillan
Contents

| List of contributors                        | page vii |
| Acknowledgements                           | x        |
| List of figures and tables                 | xi       |
| List of abbreviations                      | xii      |

1 Taking Stock: an introduction
   Lawrence Black, Nicole Robertson
   1

Part I Debating and constructing post-war decline

2 The post-war decline of the British retail co-operative movement:
   nature, causes and consequences  John K. Walton 13

3 'Trying to sell a parcel of politics with a parcel of groceries': the Co-operative Independent Commission (CIC) and consumerism in post-war Britain  Lawrence Black 33

4 Consumer co-operation and the transformation of modern food retailing: the British and Norwegian consumer co-operative movement in comparison, 1950–2002  Espen Ekberg 51

Part II Ideologies and identities

5 The consumer co-operative movement in cross-national perspective: Britain and Sweden, c.1860–1939  Mary Hilson 69

6 The identity of co-operative and mutual enterprises and the political sociology of Emile Durkheim: an introduction  Stephen Yeo 86

7 Irish railwaymen and the retail co-operative movement,
   1917–23  Conor McCabe
   107

8 Employers and workers: conflicting identities over women's wages in the co-operative movement, 1906–18  Rachael Vorberg-Rugh 121
Contents

9 'Mothers for Peace', co-operation, feminism and peace: the Women's Co-operative Guild and the anti-war movement between the wars  Andrew Flinn  138

Part III Consumerism and material culture

10 The commemorative urge: the co-operative movement's collective memory  Chris Wrigley  157

11 Promoting product quality: the Co-op and the Council of Industrial Design  Lesley Whitworth  174

12 Innovation, modernisation, consumerism: the co-operative movement and the making of British advertising and marketing culture, 1890s–1960s  Stefan Schwarzkopf  197

13 'Co-operation: the hope of the consumer'? The co-operative movement and consumer protection, 1914–60  Nicole Robertson  222

14 'Cost of a cup of tea': Fair Trade and the British co-operative movement, C.1960–2000  Matthew Anderson  240

Index  260