

Philipp Fink

Late Development in Hungary and Ireland

From Rags to Riches?

Nomos

Contents

List of Tables	13
Abbreviations	15
Introduction	17
1. Defective Capitalism	28
1.1 Hungary: Re-feudalisation, Unequal Specialisation, Backwardness	29
1.1.1 Re-feudalisation	29
Divergent Development	30
Restitution of Noble Privileges	30
Constrained Development	32
1.1.2 Agricultural Specialisation	33
The Demise of Trade	34
Complementary Imperial Incorporation	35
External Imperial Modernisation	36
1.2 Factors of Irish Underdevelopment	37
1.2.1 De-industrialisation	38
Irish Proto-Industrialisation	38
External and Internal Factors of Deindustrialisation	39
The Act of the Union (1801)	42
1.2.2 Emigration	43
The Transformation of Agriculture	43
Detrimental Development Effects	45
1.3 Agricultural Export Dependency	46
1.4 Socioeconomic Effects	47
1.4.1 Hungary	47
Noble Ascendancy	48
The Ethnic Dimension	49
The Social Dimension	50
1.4.2 Ireland	51
Agrarian Interests	52
Labour Interests	53
Party Political Structure	53
1.1 Constrained Industrialisation	55

2. Failed Industrialisation Attempts	57
2.1 The Concept of the Development Regime	58
2.1.1 Capacity and Autonomy	58
2.1.2 Popular Consent and Dissent	59
2.2 Hungarian Development Regimes	60
2.2.1 The Dual Monarchy (1867-1919)	61
The First Phase: Export Orientation and Laissez-Faire	61
The Second Phase: Industrial Protectionism	64
Results of Dualism	65
2.2.2 Economic Nationalism (1921-1944)	68
Changed Environment for Development	68
Post-WWI Reconstruction Regime	70
The Rise of the Right and Revisionist Consent	72
2.2.3 Hungarian Socialism (1948-1990)	76
The State-Socialist Development Regime	77
The Results of Forced Capital Accumulation	80
The Revolution of 1956 and the Ascent of Kádárism	81
The Era of Continuous Reforms	83
The Demise of Socialism	88
2.2.4 Continued Hungarian Backwardness	90
2.3 Irish Development Regimes	91
2.3.1 The Free State (1922-1932)	92
The Free State Development Regime	92
Restrained Capacity and Strong Autonomy	93
The Results of Laissez-Faire	96
2.3.2 Protectionism (1932-1958)	98
Protectionist Autonomy and Restrained Capacity	98
The Results of Protectionism	101
2.4 Autonomy, Capacity and Consent	104
3. The Current FDI-Led Development Regime	106
3.1 Envisaged Effects of FDI-led Development	106
3.1.1 Macroeconomic Effects	107
3.1.2 Microeconomic Effects	108
3.2 Preconditions	109
3.2.1 Attraction Strategy	110
3.2.2 Macro and Micro-Coordination	112
3.2.3 Implications for State Autonomy, Capacity and Consent	114
3.3 The Hungarian FDI-led Development Regime	115
3.3.1 External and Internal Factors for Hungarian FDI-Attraction	116

3.3.2	Hungarian Regime Readjustments	119
	Crisis Management (1990-1994)	119
	Strategic Reorientation and Stabilisation (1994-1998)	126
	Creation of a Counter-Movement (1998-2002)	130
3.4	The Irish FDI-led Development Regime	134
3.4.1	The 1958 Revolution?	135
3.4.2	Regime Readjustments in Ireland	138
	The Golden Age of Irish Economic Growth (1955-1973)	139
	Decades of Crisis (1973-1987)	143
	The Rise of the “Network State”	148
3.5	Complementarity and Divergence	154
4.	Uneven FDI-led Development	156
4.1	Dualism	157
4.1.1	Industrial Dualism	157
4.1.2	Social Dichotomy	159
4.2	FDI-led Transition in Hungary	160
4.2.1	Economic Impact of FDI in Hungary	161
	Extent of TNC Penetration	162
	Impact on Trade	164
	The Issue of Transfer Pricing	165
4.2.2	Linkages	166
	Direct and Indirect Linkages	167
4.2.3	Indigenous Firms	169
4.2.4	Characteristics of Indigenous Firms	171
	Socialist Legacies and Transition	172
	Product Market Competition	173
	Factor Market Competition	173
	Political Neglect	175
4.2.5	Dichotomy of Industry in Hungary	177
4.3	Hidden Inequality in Hungary	177
4.3.1	General Trends in Hungarian Income Inequality	178
	Income Dispersion	178
4.3.2	Transitional Winners and Losers	180
	Earnings Mobility	181
	Skill-Biased Labour Demand	181
	Collective Bargaining and Inequality	183
4.3.3	Social Implications	185
	Household Income Inequality	186
	Income Poverty and Deprivation	186

4.3.4	Inequality, Poverty and the Hungarian State	189
	Transformation of the Hungarian Welfare State	189
	Inequality Reduction	191
	Poverty Alleviation	192
4.3.5	Hungarian Social Dichotomy	194
4.4	The Irish Stepping Stone	195
4.4.1	Foreign-Owned Growth in Ireland	195
	TNC Penetration	196
	Impact on Irish Trade	198
	Transfer Pricing Distortions	199
4.4.2	Linkages	201
	Pecuniary and Productive Linkages	202
	Spillover Effects	205
4.4.3	Irish Indigenous Industry	207
	The Nature of Irish-owned Industry	208
	Displacement Effects	212
	Factor Market Competition Effects	213
	The Internal Demand Factor	215
	Political Neglect	216
4.4.4	Dichotomous Irish Industrial Structure	218
4.5	Irish Open Inequality	218
4.5.1	Irish Income Inequality	219
	Labour Market Supply and Demand Factors	220
	Social Partnership	223
4.5.2	Social Implications	225
	Household Income Distribution	225
	Poverty and Exclusion	228
4.5.3	Poverty, Inequality and the Irish State	233
	The Irish Welfare State	234
	Redistribution, Poverty Alleviation and Inclusion	235
	Social Partnership Revisited	237
4.5.4	Irish Social Dichotomy	238
4.6	Results of FDI-led Development in Hungary and Ireland	239
	Conclusion: Myth or Mirage?	242
	Bibliography	253