Understanding Powers of International Organizations

A Study of the Doctrines of Attributed Powers, Implied Powers and Constitutionalism – with a Special Focus on the Human Rights Committee

Viljam Engström

ÅBO 2009
ÅBO AKADEMIS FÖRLAG - ÅBO AKADEMI UNIVERSITY PRESS
Contents

Acknowledgements ix
Abbreviations xii

Part I Introducing the Doctrines as a Subject of Research ............. 1

1 The Three Doctrines and the Question of “Who Decides” .......... 2
1.1 First Example: Who in the UN Should Authorize Peacekeeping? By What Means? ......................................................... 2
1.2 Second Example: Who Should Decide on the Extent of European Integration? ................................................................. 6

2 Focusing on the Human Rights Committee .................................. 8
2.1 The Human Rights Committee as an International Actor ....... 8
2.2 The Human Rights Committee as a Legal Person ................. 12
2.3 The Three Doctrines and Committee Powers ....................... 15
2.3.1 The Committee Enjoys Powers that are Functionally Necessary ......................................................................................... 15
2.3.2 The Powers of the Committee are Limited to those Attributed to It .................................................................................. 17
2.3.3 Constitutionalism and the Human Rights Committee ........ 19

3 Towards a Better Understanding of Powers ................................. 20
3.1 “A Power” vis-à-vis “Power” .............................................. 20
3.2 An Evergreen or Ignored Subject? Outlining the Aim of the Thesis ......................................................................................... 25
3.3 Sketching the Research Approach ....................................... 28
3.3.1 On the Politics of Legal Reasoning ................................. 28
3.3.2 Avoiding Subjectivity .................................................... 32
3.4 The Task Ahead ..................................................................... 35

Part II Reasoning on Powers and the Image of Organizations .......... 40

1 An Outline of a Dichotomy ...................................................... 41
1.1 The Idea of Attributed Powers ............................................ 41
1.1.1 Early Powers. Organizations as Standing Conferences 41
1.1.2 The Image of Independence Emerges ............................ 45
1.1.3 Attribution as a Viable Notion ....................................... 49
1.2 The Idea of Implied Powers

1.2.1 From an Ever Increasing Enthusiasm

1.2.1.1 The ICJ on the Role of the UN

1.2.1.2 The Doctrine as a Tool for European Integration

1.2.2 ... to a More Restricted Account?

1.3 Concluding Remarks: Defining Powers and the Idea of “Trends”

2 Powers - An Inevitable Source of Debate

2.1 Framing the Question: On the Source of International Obligations

2.2 Powers as Constitutive of the Independence of Organizations

2.3 Overdoing It: Deriving Powers from the Existence of an Organization

2.4 Powers as Expressive of the Intent of Members

2.5 Overdoing it: Associating Powers with Member Views

2.6 Concluding Remarks: A Dual Image of Organizations

3 Structuring the Dichotomy

3.1 Internal and External Means of Guidance

3.1.1 Expressly Safeguarding Member Prerogatives

3.1.2 Principles of Interpretation as Guidance

3.2 The Constitutionalization of Organizations

3.2.1 From a Constitutional Character to Constitutionalism

3.2.2 Constitutionalism in Organizations

3.2.2.1 The Supranational Constitutionalism of Europe

3.2.2.2 Constitutionalism in the WTO

3.2.2.3 The UN and the Idea of a World Constitution

3.3 Concluding Remarks: The Promise of Constitutionalism

Part III Three Doctrines in Search of Content

1 Reconciling Attributed and Implied Powers

1.1 The Elusiveness of Implied Powers

1.1.1 Implied Powers or Implied Functions?

1.1.2 Different Expressions of a Functional Character

1.1.3 The Problems with Defining Functional Necessity

1.1.4 Looking for Guidance in the Constituent Instrument
3.3 Democratic Legitimacy and the Committee .......................... 254
3.4 On the Difficulties of Democratization ................................. 257
  3.4.1 Introducing Democratic Elements to the Committee . 257
  3.4.2 Is There a Universal Conception of Human Rights?... 263

4 Concluding Remarks: Three Dichotomies and the Determination of Human Rights Committee Powers .................. 269

Part V General Conclusion .................................................. 274

  1 A Recapitulation ................................................................. 274
  2 Contributions to Understanding Powers of Organizations .......... 281
      2.1 Revealing Different Aspects of “Who Decides” .......... 281
      2.2 In Prospect ................................................................. 284

Svensk sammanfattning .......................................................... xv
Bibliography ................................................................. xxiii
Index ..................................................................................... lxix