Financial Participation of Employees in the EU-27

Jens Lowitzsch
Contents

List of Figures xii
List of Tables xiv
Foreword xv
Preface xix
Acknowledgements xxii
List of Contributors xxiii
Network of Affiliated Country Experts xxv

Part I A European Platform for Financial Participation

1 The Building Block Approach to a Common European Model 3
Jens Lowitzsch

1.1 Introduction 3

1.2 Objective and context 5
1.2.1 Socio-economic background 5
1.2.1.1 The function of ownership 5
1.2.1.2 Capital concentration is dysfunctional 6
1.2.1.3 Insufficient legal foundations 7
1.2.2 European initiatives 7
1.2.2.1 The PEPPER Reports 7
1.2.2.2 Finding solutions for a 'New Social Europe' 9
1.2.2.3 Summary of the postulate of the European policymakers 9

1.2.3 The current reform process 11
1.2.3.1 Actual tendencies of property development – A challenge for social policy 11
1.2.3.2 Status quo 12
1.2.3.3 Recent studies 13

1.2.4 The path to a European regulation 14
1.2.4.1 Focus: Legislating financial participation schemes 14
Contents

1.2.4.2 Unanimous decision versus majority vote 15
1.2.4.3 Different contexts, different approaches: The building block approach 15

1.3 The current situation in Europe 16
1.3.1 Policy issues 16
1.3.2 Problems related to the legal framework and transnational obstacles 17
1.3.3 The national level 19
1.3.3.1 The situation in the old Member States of the EU 19
1.3.3.2 The situation in the new Member States and candidate countries 19

1.4 Towards a European concept of financial participation 19
1.4.1 Choosing a building block approach 19
1.4.1.1 Module One: Profit-sharing (cash-based and deferred) 36
1.4.1.2 Module Two: Employee shareholding (employee shares and broad-based stock options) 37
1.4.1.3 Module Three: ESOPs and share-based profit-sharing 39
1.4.1.4 Specific features of ESOPs 40
1.4.2 Options for creating the legal foundations of a European concept 43
1.4.2.1 Recommendation according to Article 249 paragraph 1 (1) ECT 43
1.4.2.2 Directive level: Amending existing European company law 43
1.4.2.3 National level: Building on existing national company law 44

1.5 Conclusions and summary 52
1.5.1 Compliance with the postulates of the European policymakers 52
1.5.1.1 Achieving competitiveness while maintaining diversity 52
1.5.1.2 The building block approach: Meeting essential principles ... 53
1.5.1.3 ... and overcoming transnational obstacles 54
1.5.2 ESOPs: A thrust for innovation 54
  1.5.2.1 ESOP as a vehicle for business succession 55
  1.5.2.2 ESOP enhancing cash flow 56
  1.5.2.3 The private equity buyout versus the ESOP 57

Part II The Legal Background

2 The Challenge: Functional Changes in Property Rights in Europe 73
  Herwig Roggemann and Jens Lowitzsch
  2.1 Ownership in the welfare state and in post-socialist transformation 73
  2.2 Legal foundations of property 74
    2.2.1 Functions of ownership 74
    2.2.2 The changing content of property 75
    2.2.3 Ownership and control of productive property 76
  2.3 Ownership in European law 77
    2.3.1 European Community law in a narrower sense 78
    2.3.2 Ownership and European fundamental rights 79
  2.4 The problem: Unequal distribution and concentration of capital 80
  2.5 The German example 81

3 The Legal Framework for Implementing Financial Participation at the Supranational Level 85
  Jens Lowitzsch and Natalia Spitsa
  3.1 The legislative process 85
  3.2 Legal sources for employee participation at a European level 87
  3.3 Dealing with tax incentives 89
    3.3.1 The problem 89
    3.3.2 General taxation of PEPPER schemes in the EU 90
      3.3.2.1 Employee share ownership 93
      3.3.2.2 Profit-sharing 101
      3.3.2.3 Intermediary entities 101
    3.3.3 Specific tax incentives for PEPPER schemes in the EU 101
      3.3.3.1 Share-based plans 103
      3.3.3.2 Stock options 112
      3.3.3.3 Cash-based profit-sharing 113
    3.3.4 Conclusions 113
4 Systematic Overview of Financial Participation

Jens Lowitzsch and Axel Bormann

4.1 Participation in property rights: Control and returns

4.1.1 Participation in decision making

4.1.2 Financial participation

4.2 Employee Participation in Profits and Enterprise Results (PEPPER schemes)

4.2.1 Profit-sharing

4.2.2 Employee share ownership

4.2.2.1 Direct purchase of shares/share savings plans

4.2.2.2 Broad-based stock options

4.2.2.3 Employee Stock Ownership Plans

4.2.2.4 Privatisation-related voucher/coupon schemes

4.2.3 Employee share ownership versus profit-sharing

4.3 Asset accumulation and employee savings plans

4.4 Discussion: Pros and cons

4.4.1 Motivation, productivity and economic performance

4.4.2 Economic growth and distributive effects: Binary economics

4.4.3 Position of trade unions

4.4.4 Financial participation and participation in decision making

4.4.5 Failure rate of conventional and employee-owned companies

5 The US ESOP as an Example of an Advanced Model

John D. Menke, Stefan Hanisch and Jens Lowitzsch

5.1 Historical background

5.2 Foundations of the US Employee Stock Ownership Plan

5.3 Structural changes needed to implement ESOPs and profit-sharing schemes

5.4 Key tax incentives for ESOPs

5.5 The interim balance in 2007

5.6 Future prospects for ESOPs in the US

5.7 Models of financial participation – The US and French systems
5.8 Four case studies

5.8.1 Market Contractors, Ltd. (Business Succession ESOP)
5.8.1.1 The company 143
5.8.1.2 The plan 144
5.8.1.3 Buying out the owner 145
5.8.1.4 Average plan participant 146

5.8.2 Stone Construction Equipment, Inc. (Business Succession ESOP)
5.8.2.1 The company 147
5.8.2.2 The plan 148
5.8.2.3 Buying out the owner(s) 149
5.8.2.4 Average plan participant 149

5.8.3 Bad case: Golden Bear Packaging, Inc. (Business Succession ESOP)
5.8.3.1 The company 150
5.8.3.2 The plan 150
5.8.3.3 Buying out the owner 151
5.8.3.4 Average plan participant 152

5.8.4 Bad case: Howland Electric & Electronic Wholesale Company, Inc.
5.8.4.1 The company 152
5.8.4.2 The plan 153
5.8.4.3 Financing the ESOP transactions (as opposed to a succession ESOP) 154
5.8.4.4 Average plan participant 154

Part III Empirical Evidence and Country Information

6 Benchmarking Financial Participation in the EU
Iraj Hashi, Richard Woodward and Jens Lowitzsch

6.1 Introduction: Assessing and benchmarking financial participation – The PEPPER IV Report
6.1.1 Aims of the project and specific difficulties to be dealt with 159
6.1.2 The benchmarking indicators 161
6.1.2.1 Sources 161
6.1.2.2 The indicators and their link to the Commission principles 164
6.2 Availability of financial participation schemes in EU companies
6.2.1 Percentage of firms offering broad-based FP to employees 166
6.2.2 Financial participation schemes by size and sector 168
6.2.3 Percentage of employees covered 171
6.2.4 Percentage of large (listed) firms with employee share plans 172
6.3 Take-up rate of financial participation schemes in the workforce 174
6.3.1 Percentage of employees participating in FP schemes 174
6.3.2 Percentage of employees participating in profit-sharing schemes with pre-defined formulas on a regular, ongoing basis 176
6.3.3 Percentage of employees holding shares in largest (listed) firms 177
6.4 Conclusions 178

7 Country Profiles 181

Jens Lowitzsch, Natalia Spitsa and Stefan Hanisch
For each of the 29 countries (I-XXIX)
Evolution and diffusion of FP schemes
General attitude (Social partners' attitudes and current government policy)
Legal and fiscal framework
Share ownership
Profit-sharing
Participation in decision-making
I Belgium 181
II Bulgaria 185
III Croatia 188
IV Cyprus 192
V Czech Republic 195
VI Denmark 199
VII Germany 202
VIII Estonia 207
IX Greece 210
X Spain 213
XI France 216
Contents

XII  Hungary  222
XIII Ireland  227
XIV Italy  232
XV Latvia  236
XVI Lithuania  239
XVII Luxembourg  242
XVIII Malta  244
XIX Netherlands  248
XX Austria  250
XXI Poland  256
XXII Portugal  261
XXIII Romania  263
XXIV Slovakia  269
XXV Slovenia  272
XXVI Finland  277
XXVII Sweden  281
XXVIII Turkey  285
XXIX United Kingdom  290

Bibliography  309

Index  319