Debating coal closures
Economic calculation in the coal dispute 1984–5

Edited by
DAVID COOPER
Price Waterhouse Professor of Accounting and Finance, University of Manchester
Institute of Science and Technology

and
TREVOR HOPPER
Lecturer in Accounting,
University of Manchester

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS
Cambridge
New York New Rochelle Melbourne Sydney
Contents

1 Introduction: Financial calculation in industrial and political debate  page 1
D. J. COOPER and T. M. HOPPER

Part I: The economics and accounting of the National Coal Board

2 Pit closures: some economics  25
G. DAVIES and D. METCALF

3 The costs and benefits of coal pit closures  46
P. MINFORD and P. KUNG

4 The economic case against pit closures  57
ANDREW GLYN

5 NCB accounts: a mine of mis-information?  95
A. J. BERRY, T. CAPPS, D. J. COOPER, T. M. HOPPER and E. A. LOWE

6 How large a coal industry?  107
P. W. ROBINSON

Part II: Economic strategies of NCB management

7 The economic case for deep-mined coal in Scotland  119
G. KEREVAN and R. SAVILLE

8 Aberystwyth report on coal  161
T. CUTLER, C. HASLAM, J. WILLIAMS and K. WILLIAMS

Part III: Coal in context

9 Economic background to the coal dispute  195
P. W. ROBINSON
Contents

10 Nuclear power and the coal industry
   S. FOTHERGILL 225

11 The restructuring of the British coal industry
   A. BURNS, M. NEWBY and J. WINTERTON 253

List of contributors 278
Index 283