Contents

List of figures xi
List of tables xix
Preface to second edition xxii
Preface to first edition xxiv

PART I
1960–72

1 Introduction 1

Appendix: A guide to the history of Ghana's currency 8

2 Development, disequilibrium and state interventionism 12

3 The economic strategies of Nkrumah and his successors 37

I Nkrumah's development strategy 38
II Economic strategies after Nkrumah 60

4 Domestic economic performance in the 1960s 73

Appendix: The national accounts and other statistical sources 92

5 External performance: The foreign exchange constraint and its causes 107

6 Planning, saving and economic management 145

I The planning experience 145
II The mobilization of resources 158
III Short-run economic management 166
Contents

7 Modernization without growth 182

Appendix A: Educated high-level manpower supplies, 1960–70 196

Appendix B: On the measurement of excess capacity 198

8 The unbalanced growth of agriculture and industry 202

9 The state as entrepreneur 234

10 The state as controller 288

   I Import controls 289
   II Price controls 314
   III Conclusions 319

11 After Nkrumah: Interpretations of policies, 1966–72 328

   Appendix: Ownership status of public enterprises and corporations existing at end-1965 351

12 Lessons from 1960–72 359

PART II

1972–2008

Introduction to the new chapters 397

13 From implosion to boom: 1972–2008 398

   I The black years of 1972–83 398
   II 1983–91: The economic recovery programme 405
   III 1992–2002: Responses to democratization 409
   IV 2003–08: Entering a golden age? 413
   V Summary: From implosion to boom, 1976–2008 418
   VI Human welfare 420
   VII Conclusion 425

   Appendix: Key macroeconomic indicators 427

   I The sectoral structure 431
   II What growth accounting tells us 435
III The export record 439
IV The financial sector 441
V Summing-up on structural change 445
VI Saving and investment 446

15 Forces for change: 1983–2008 449

I The influence of external factors 449
II The importance and limitations of macroeconomic management 457
III How much public–private rebalancing? 458
IV Politics and the possibilities of progress 465
V So what has made the difference? 475
VI Still development economics in action? 476
VII Conclusion: The dominance of the domestic 482

Bibliography of works cited 485
Additional works cited for the second edition 503
Index 507