Frank Decker

The Emergence of Money in Convict New South Wales

Metropolis-Verlag
Marburg 2010
Contents

Index of Tables .................................................................................................................. 8
Preface .................................................................................................................................. 9
Introduction .......................................................................................................................... 11

1 The English Law of Bills and Notes 1800-1849 ......................................................... 19
1.1 Essential Properties ...................................................................................................... 20
1.2 Payment of Money in Specie ....................................................................................... 22
1.3 Place of Presentment .................................................................................................... 23
1.4 Transfer and the Liabilities of the Parties ................................................................. 24
1.5 Remedies ..................................................................................................................... 26
1.6 Bank Notes and a New Interpretation of the Bearer Clause .................................... 27
1.7 English Regulations Constraining Bills and Notes of Small Amounts .................... 31
1.8 English and New South Wales Law ........................................................................... 33

2 State-issued Payment Instruments and Coins, and the Monetary Standard of New South Wales ................................................................. 35
2.1 Consolidated Money: Store Receipts, Paymaster’s Bills, Holey Dollars and Dumps ......................................................................................................................... 35
2.2 Consolidated Money as a Settlement Asset ............................................................... 40
2.3 The Question of the Monetary Standard – King’s Experiment ........44
2.4 Copper Coin .................................................................................................48
2.5 The Emergence of a New Standard: £ Currency ...........................................54

3 Properties of Private Bills and Notes ...............................................65
3.1 Bills and Notes as the Dominant Means of Payment .........................65
3.2 The Property Basis of Bills and Notes ......................................................71
3.3 Early Money in form of Small Merchant Notes .................................77
3.4 How Merchant Notes set the Sterling / Currency Exchange Rate ................81
3.5 The Role of Barter as an Alternative to Bills and Notes ...................88

4 Analysis of Instruments and Currency Regulations ...........................93
4.1 From English Settlement to Macquarie’s 30 Jun 1810 Proclamation ........93
4.2 From Macquarie’s 30 Jun 1810 Proclamation to the Formation of the Commercial Society on 18 Oct 1813 .............110
4.3 From the Formation of the Commercial Society on 18 Oct 1813 to Macquarie’s 7 Dec 1816 Proclamation ......................121
4.4 From Macquarie’s 1816 Proclamations to the Introduction of the Dollar Standard in 1822 .........................................................136

5 Implications for Monetary Theory .......................................................153
5.1 The Origins of Money Revisited ..............................................................153
  5.1.1 The Barter Explanation ...........................................................................154
  5.1.2 The State Explanation ...........................................................................157
  5.1.3 The Property Explanation ....................................................................161
5.2 Settlement Assets: the Missing Category in the Theory of Money ..........................................................169