Improving Policy Coherence in South Asia

Edited by
Manas Bhattacharya
| Contents |

List of tables, figures, boxes and appendices ........................................... 9
Preface ............................................................................................................ 15
Acknowledgements .......................................................................................... 19
Contributors .................................................................................................... 21
Abbreviations .................................................................................................... 23

1. Policy coherence, growth, investment and decent work in South Asia: Some reflections ......................................... 27
MANAS BHATTACHARYA
1.1 Introduction ............................................................................................... 27
1.2 Growth and employment ........................................................................... 37
1.3 Growth inducing policies and their implications for employment growth .................................................. 48
1.4 Growth–Employment nexus:
Decent work implications and coherence ..................................................... 59
1.5 Highlights of the following chapters ......................................................... 61
1.6 Conclusions ............................................................................................... 85

2. Growth, investment and decent work in Bangladesh: The need for a better policy mix ......................................... 89
MOHAMMED ALI RASHID
2.1 Introduction ............................................................................................... 89
2.2 Economic growth, investment and decent employment: The status .................................................................. 91
2.3 Macroeconomic policy and decent employment ....................................... 112
2.4 Labour productivity and employment ...................................................... 125
2.5 The quality of employment in the formal manufacturing sector ......................................................................... 129
2.6 Conclusions ............................................................................................... 131
3. India: A case for strengthening policy coherence. 133
   K.P. Kannan
   3.1 Introduction 133
   3.2 Growth, investment and employment 135
   3.3 Growth and decent work 138
   3.4 The disconnect between growth and decent work 143
   3.5 Decent work and macroeconomic policy 146
   3.6 Potential trade-offs between employment and other macroeconomic policy objectives 150

4. Labour markets outcomes and policy challenges in India. 169
   Ahmad Ahsan, Dipak Dasgupta and Ashish Narain
   4.1 Introduction 169
   4.2 Pattern of economic growth and labour market 171
   4.3 Productivity, wage growth and job quality 175
   4.4 Is there a trade-off between productivity and employment growth? 184
   4.5 How can government policies help? 188
   4.6 Labour regulation and reforms 195
   4.7 Conclusions: India's employment challenges 202

5. Nepal: A critical assessment of experience. 205
   Dilli Raj Khanal
   5.1 Introduction 205
   5.2 Growth performance and employment patterns 210
   5.3 Macroeconomic policies and decent employment in Nepal 223
   5.4 Major conclusions and policy implications 253

6. Pakistan: A tale of controlled market and weak governance. 265
   Nadeem Ul Haque
   6.1 Introduction 265
   6.2 Pakistan's labour market 266
   6.3 Planning has not worked while quality of governance has declined 270
   6.4 A review of Pakistan's growth 272
   6.5 Paradigm shift: The new development thinking 275