Interagency Coordination During Disaster

Strategic Choices for the UN, NGOs, and other Humanitarian Actors in the Field
Study Outline

List of Abbreviations 13

List of Exhibits and Tables 17

1 Introduction 21
   1.1 Purpose of the Study 23
   1.2 Proceedings of the Study 30
   1.3 Research Method 31

2 Coordination and Humanitarian Relief – Current State of Literature 43
   2.1 Overview of Major Strands in the Literature 44
   2.2 Interorganizational Coordination as a Subject of Concern in the Literature on Humanitarian Relief 48
   2.3 Main Shortcomings of Studies on Humanitarian Relief to Date 70
   2.4 First Forays into Applying Lessons from Organization Science to Humanitarian Relief 71
   2.5 Summary and Concluding Remarks 77

3 Trends and Actors in Global Humanitarian Action 81
   3.1 Trends in Financing Humanitarian Aid 81
   3.2 The Humanitarian Reform Agenda and the Role of the UN 92
   3.3 State Sovereignty and the Responsibility to Protect 106
   3.4 Politicization of Humanitarian Aid 110
   3.5 Overview of Main Humanitarian Actors 114
   3.6 Summary and Concluding Remarks 143

4 Coordination of Humanitarian Relief: A Theory-Guided Approach 147
   4.1 Coordination in International Relations Theory 147
   4.2 Interagency Coordination in Organization Theory 153
   4.3 UN Coordination Revisited 172
   4.4 A New Framework for Coordination 175
   4.5 Summary and Concluding Remarks 201
5 Case Study: The Humanitarian Crisis in Darfur

5.1 Historical Background
5.2 Record of the Humanitarian Relief Response to Date
5.3 The Relevant Context of Humanitarian Relief in Darfur
5.4 Coordination as Loose Alliance, Orchestrated Alliance, Lead Partnership, or Lead Agency
5.5 Summary and Concluding Remarks

6 Conclusions

6.1 Summary of Findings
6.2 Recommendations
6.3 Critical Assessment
6.4 Perspectives for Future Research

Key Terms and Definitions

Bibliography
Table of Contents

List of Abbreviations 13

List of Exhibits and Tables 17

1 Introduction 21
   1.1 Purpose of the Study 23
   1.2 Proceedings of the Study 30
   1.3 Research Method 31
      1.3.1 Research Assumptions 31
      1.3.2 Case Study Approach 34
      1.3.3 Theory Development 39

2 Coordination and Humanitarian Relief – Current State of Literature 43
   2.1 Overview of Major Strands in the Literature 44
   2.2 Interorganizational Coordination as a Subject of Concern in the Literature on Humanitarian Relief 48
      2.2.1 Individual and Group Performance Reviews 49
      2.2.2 First Generation Studies – the 1990s 51
      2.2.3 Second Generation Studies – The New Millennium and Humanitarian Reform 61
      2.2.4 Preliminary Remarks 69
   2.3 Main Shortcomings of Studies on Humanitarian Relief to Date 70
   2.4 First Forays into Applying Lessons from Organization Science to Humanitarian Relief 71
   2.5 Summary and Concluding Remarks 77

3 Trends and Actors in Global Humanitarian Action 81
   3.1 Trends in Financing Humanitarian Aid 81
      3.1.1 Humanitarian vs. Development Aid 82
      3.1.2 Donor Concentration 84
      3.1.3 Bilateralization of Humanitarian Aid 86
   3.2 The Humanitarian Reform Agenda and the Role of the UN 92
      3.2.1 The Humanitarian Coordinator System 93
      3.2.2 The Cluster Approach 98
      3.2.3 The Changing Role of the Humanitarian UN Agencies 103
5.2.2 Achievements and Disappointments

5.3 The Relevant Context of Humanitarian Relief in Darfur
   5.3.1 Development of Network Characteristics
   5.3.2 Network Catalysts
   5.3.3 Power
   5.3.4 The Structure of Interests among Humanitarian Actors

5.4 Coordination as Loose Alliance, Orchestrated Alliance, Lead Partnership, or Lead Agency
   5.4.1 Network Outcomes
   5.4.2 Internal Capacity and External Legitimacy of the Most Critical Actor(s)
   5.4.3 Preferred vs. Actual Coordination Types

5.5 Summary and Concluding Remarks

6 Conclusions
   6.1 Summary of Findings
   6.2 Recommendations
      6.2.1 General Normative Implications
      6.2.2 Generic Actor-Specific Implications
      6.2.3 Generic Network-Specific Implications
      6.2.4 Improving Humanitarian Practices – Tentative Suggestions
   6.3 Critical Assessment
      6.3.1 Practical Limitations
      6.3.2 The Role of Donors in Coordination
      6.3.3 Research Method and Scope
   6.4 Perspectives for Future Research
      6.4.1 Towards a Coordination Spectrum and Alternative Design Criteria
      6.4.2 From Structural Design to Process
      6.4.3 Donor Preferences and Coordination
      6.4.4 Further Exploration of Organization Theory

Key Terms and Definitions

Bibliography