The Rise of the Global Nomad
How to manage the new professional in order to gain recovery and maximize future growth

Jim Matthewman
CONTENTS

Preface xi
Acknowledgements xiii
List of figures xv
List of tables xvi

PART ONE The source of recovery 1

01 The impact of the economic crisis 5
Demographic changes 9

02 Generational change in the workplace 14
The Baby Boomers 14
Generation X 17
Generation Y 19
Change 20
Tech savvy 20
International and multicultural 20
Social ethics 21
Exuberant confidence 21
Image 22

03 The emerging and developing markets 23
Growing confidence 26
Political clout 28
Lands of opportunity 30
Improving education 30

PART TWO The nomads 33

04 The rise of the professional nomad 35
Who are these new global nomads? 36
Well travelled and multilingual 47
An energetic, can-do mentality 51
Strong social priorities 52
11 Managing today’s global talent 139
Why is global talent management so important? 140
Global resourcing 142
Develop a Generation Y programme 143
New ways of working 145
Corporate targets in the new world 147

12 The global nomad deal 150
Rewarding the global nomads 151
Engaging the nomads 155

13 A winning formula 160
Career development is playing a role in attracting the new global nomad 161
Companies need to tackle the redeployment challenge 162
It’s time to create a global mobility manager 163

PART FIVE How do multinationals envision mobility and the future workforce? 167

14 A view to the future: 12 corporate perspectives 169
Dr Nasser Mareth, Group CEO, Qtel International 169
Pekka Lundmark, CEO, Konecranes 171
Dr Tim Miller, Director Property, Research and Assurance, Standard Chartered plc, and Chairman, Standard Chartered Korea 172
Shaikh Ahmed Al Khalifa, Group General Manager, HR and Development, Batelco Group 174
David Haines, CEO, Grohe AG 177
Brian Schipper, Global Head of HR, Cisco Systems 178
Cathy Turner, Group Human Resources Director, Barclays Bank plc 181
Hugh Bucknall, Chairman, Singapore Offshore Services 182
Beryl Cook, Executive Vice President, News Corporation International 184
Rita Vanhauwenhusyse, Global Talent Adviser, Rio Tinto plc 187
Fredrico Wright, Corporate HR, Remuneration and Benefits Manager, Petrobras 188
Karen Beyer, Global Mobility Manager, GE 191