Contents

List of figures and tables  xxxi
List of contributors  xxiii
Symbols and conventions  xxv

PART I
Introductory  1

1 Introduction  3
Daniele Besomi

1.1 Dictionaries as a literary genre  4
  1.1.1 Encyclopaedias, dictionaries, lexica and glossaries  4
  1.1.2 The fragmentation of knowledge  6
  1.1.3 Dictionary architecture  8
  1.1.4 The encyclopaedic goal  12
  1.1.5 The elected audience  13
  1.1.6 Dictionaries and textbooks  16
  1.1.7 A literary genre  16
1.2 Dictionary articles and the history of economic thought  17
1.3 Structure and limits of this project  20

2 A brief history of economic dictionaries: an essay in bibliography  27
Daniele Besomi

2.1 Introduction  27
2.2 Economics and practical arts  27
2.3 Commercial, business and financial dictionaries  28
2.4 Political economy and economics  31
  2.4.1 The nineteenth century  31
  2.4.2 The twentieth century  34
  2.4.3 Internet publications  38
2.5 The encyclopaedias of the social sciences  39
  2.5.1 The nineteenth century  39
  2.5.2 The twentieth century  41
2.6 From general to particular: hyperspecialized dictionaries 42
2.7 Biographical dictionaries 43
2.8 The chronological, spatial and dimensional distribution of dictionaries 44

3 Naming crises: a note on semantics and chronology 54
   Daniele Besomi

3.1 Introduction 54
   3.1.1 Words in prominent position 54
   3.1.2 ‘Panics produce texts’ 55

3.2 Semantics and chronology 57
   3.2.1 Glut 57
   3.2.2 Distress 59
   3.2.3 Embarrassment 60
   3.2.4 Stagnation 62
   3.2.5 Panic 66
   3.2.6 Bubble 70
   3.2.7 Depression 74
   3.2.8 Crisis 78
   3.2.9 Cycle 89
   3.2.10 Fluctuations 102
   3.2.11 Recession 108

3.3 Concluding note on the choice of terms 111

4 Dictionary reconstructions of the history of the theories of crises and cycles: a meta-taxonomy 133
   Daniele Besomi

4.1 Categorizing business cycle theories 133
4.2 Early surveys of the literature 134
4.3 Say's Law and overproduction 135
4.4 Optimist liberals and pessimist socialists 138
4.5 Old vs. new theories 139
4.6 The aetiological approach 141
   4.6.1 The origins of the causal taxonomy 141
   4.6.2 The aetiological approach in dictionaries 145
4.7 Abandoning the causal representation 146
4.8 The formal properties of models 147
4.9 Digging rather than skating: the quest for a fundamental line of division 149
   4.9.1 Say's law (again) 150
   4.9.2 Schools of thought and chronological narrations 151
   4.9.3 Exogenous vs. endogenous approaches 154
   4.9.4 Stability vs. instability 156
4.10 Miscellaneous approaches 159
  4.10.1 A chronosophical approach 161

PART II
The classic dictionaries 165

5 Between progress and decline: crises in early French dictionaries and encyclopaedias (1830–1840) 167
  Ludovic Frobert
    5.1 French dictionaries c. 1830 167
    5.2 French Liberals before 1848: progress punctuated by crises 168
    5.3 The French Republicans: the possibility of progress without crisis 169
    5.4 The Saint-Simonians and their dissident movements: progress through the alternation of periods 171
    5.5 The Fourierists: crises as indicators of the corruption and decomposition of ‘civilization’ 173
    5.6 Conclusion 174

6 The analysis of crises in early French dictionaries and encyclopaedias 177
  Daniele Besomi
    6.1 Entries on crises in early French dictionaries 177
    6.2 The definition of crises 178
    6.3 The phenomenology and the causes of crises 179
    6.4 The function of crises 182
    6.5 Dictionaries and the literature on crises in the first half of the nineteenth century 183
      6.5.1 The definitions 184
      6.5.2 On causality 186
    6.6 Summing up: Garnier’s entry on commercial crisis 190

7 Wilhelm Roscher’s crises theory: from production crises to sales crises 197
  Harald Hagemann
    7.1 The Brockhaus encyclopaedia 197
    7.2 Wilhelm Roscher 198
    7.3 Roscher on crises 200
    7.4 Assessment 205
8 Charles Coquelin: banking monopoly and commercial crises
Daniele Besomi

8.1 The Dictionnaire de l'économie politique 209
8.1.1 History and revisions 211
8.1.2 Influence 211
8.2 Charles Coquelin 211
8.3 Crises in the Dictionnaire de l'économie politique 212
8.3.1 The entries relating to crises 212
8.3.2 Summary of Coquelin's entry on commercial crises 213
8.4 Assessment 216

9 Commercial crisis and credit in the first Spanish general encyclopaedia (1851–1855)
Jesus Astigarraga and Juan Zabalza

9.1 Introduction 225
9.2 The Enciclopedia moderna (1851–1855) 226
9.3 Jose Joaquin Mora as author of the entries for credit and commercial crisis in Enciclopedia moderna 227
9.4 Credit and commercial crises in Enciclopedia moderna 229
9.4.1 CRISIS COMERCIAL in Enciclopedia moderna 230
9.4.2 CRÉDITO in Enciclopedia moderna 231
9.5 Concluding assessment of the entries on credit and crisis in Enciclopedia moderna 233

10 Expectations and crises in Auguste Ott's Dictionnaire des sciences politiques et sociales
Daniele Besomi

10.1 Ott's dictionary and the Encyclopédie théologique 238
10.2 Auguste Ott 240
10.3 Crises in Ott's Dictionnaire 241
10.4 Assessment 244

11 Gerolamo Boccardo on internally generated commercial crises
Daniele Besomi

11.1 The Dizionario della economia politica 249
11.1.1 Editorial history 251
11.1.2 Reception 252
11.2 Gerolamo Boccardo 253
11.3 Crises in Boccardo's dictionary 255
11.3.1 The first edition 255
11.3.2 The later editions 258
11.4 Assessment 260
12 Clément Juglar (1863–1891): tracking and interpreting the periodic return of crises 265
Cécile Dangel-Hagnauer

12.1 The dictionaries 265
12.1.1 The Dictionnaire général de la politique 267
12.1.2 The Nouveau dictionnaire d’économie politique 269
12.2 Joseph Clément Juglar 272
12.3 The entries 273
12.3.1 CRISSES COMMERCIALES in the Dictionnaire général de la politique 274
12.3.2 CRISSES COMMERCIALES in the Nouveau dictionnaire d’économie politique 279
12.4 Concluding remarks 281

13 Henry D. Macleod's Dictionary of political economy: Britain's first, aborted attempt 286
Cécile Dangel-Hagnauer

13.1 A biographical, bibliographical, historical and practical dictionary of political economy 286
13.2 Henry Dunning Macleod 288
13.2.1 Presumptuousness and innovativeness 289
13.2.2 Macleod’s particular brand of political economy 291
13.2.3 Wasting opportunities and leaving one’s mark 292
13.3 CRISIS, COMMERCIAL 292
13.3.1 The origin and the causes of crises 293
13.3.2 The history of commercial catastrophes 295
13.3.3 The opinions of ‘authorities’ on the subject of crises 299
13.3.4 On the course of action to pursue in the event of commercial crises 300
13.4 Concluding remarks 302

14 Adolf Wagner: economic crises, capitalism and human nature 307
Vitantonio Gioia

14.1 The Handwörterbuch der Volkswirtschaftslehre 307
14.2 Adolf Heinrich Gotthilf Wagner 308
14.3 The German debate on crises and Wagner’s contribution 311
14.4 The mechanics of crises and their explanation 314
14.5 Capitalism, crises and economic motives 317

15 Émile de Laveleye: economic crises, Christianity and socialism 320
Ludovic Frobert

15.1 La Grande encyclopédie 320
15.1.1 A positivist encyclopaedia 320
15.1.2 Laveleye and the Grande Encyclopédie 322
15.2 Émile de Laveleye 322
15.3 Crises 326
15.4 A sower of ideas 329

16 Of the 'old' Palgrave entries on crises 332
Pascal Bridel

16.1 The 'old' Palgrave 332
16.2 The authors 334
16.3 The entries 336

17 From crises to cycles: Tugan-Baranovsky and the Brockhaus–Efron (1895–1915) 343
François Allisson

17.1 The Brockhaus–Efron encyclopaedic dictionary 343
17.2 Mikhail Ivanovich Tugan-Baranovsky 345
17.3 Summary of Tugan's ECONOMIC CRISSES 346
  17.3.1 Brockhaus–Efron (1895) 347
  17.3.2 Small Brockhaus–Efron (1909) 350
  17.3.3 New Brockhaus–Efron (1915) 351
17.4 Assessment 352
  17.4.1 From the book to the entry: writing for an encyclopaedia 353
  17.4.2 The terminology: from crises to cycles 353
  17.4.3 Rewriting history: the status of encyclopaedic knowledge 354
  17.4.4 A Western theory in a Russian encyclopaedia? 355
17.5 Tugan's original references 355
  17.5.1 Tugan's bibliography (1895) 355
  17.5.2 Tugan's bibliography (1909) 357
  17.5.3 Tugan's bibliography (1915) 357

18 Heinrich Herkner: inequality of income distribution, overcapitalization and underconsumption 361
Harald Hagemann

18.1 Conrad's Handworterbuch der Staatswissenschaften 361
18.2 Heinrich Herkner 362
18.3 Herkner on crises 366
18.4 Assessment 371

19 Wilhelm Lexis: crises and overproduction 374
Harald Hagemann

19.1 Elster's Wörterbuch der Volkswirtschaft 374
19.2 Wilhelm Lexis 376
19.3 Lexis on crises and overproduction 378
19.4 Assessment 381

20 Arthur Spiethoff: from economic crises to business cycle theory 385
Vitantonio Gioia

20.1 The Handwörterbuch der Staatswissenschaften 385
20.2 Arthur Spiethoff 387
20.3 Krisen 388
20.4 Overproduction and business cycles 392
20.5 Concluding remarks 396

21 Konyus’s ‘Economic conjuncture’ in the Granat encyclopaedia 401
Vincent Barnett

21.1 The encyclopaedia 401
21.2 The author 402
21.3 The entry 404
21.4 Assessment 408

22 Wesley Mitchell, Arthur Burns and Trygve Haavelmo on business cycles: the two Encyclopaedia of the social sciences (1930–1935 and 1968) 411
Pier Francesco Asso and Luca Fiorito

22.1 The Encyclopaedia of the social sciences, 1930–1935 411
22.2 Wesley C. Mitchell on business cycles 414
22.3 The International encyclopaedia of the social sciences 418
22.4 Arthur Burns on business cycles 420
22.5 Haavelmo’s entry on business cycles 423

23 Tinbergen on dynamics and conjuncture in Stridiron’s Bedrijfseconomische encyclopedie 427
Peter Rodenburg

23.1 The encyclopaedia 427
23.1.1 History and revisions 428
23.1.2 Influence 428
23.2 The author 429
23.3 Business cycles in the Bedrijfseconomische encyclopedie 430
23.3.1 The entries relating to business cycles 430
23.3.2 Tinbergen’s entry on business cycle theory 431
23.4 Assessment 434
PART III
The recent dictionaries

24 Nikolai Kondratiev and long waves in recent dictionaries and encyclopaedias
Francisco Louçã

24.1 Introduction 443
24.2 Predecessors and long waves of debates 444
24.3 Nikolai Kondratiev 446
  24.3.1 The reception of Kondratiev's ideas 446
  24.3.2 Kondratiev's analysis of long waves 447
24.4 The assessment of the contemporary polemic on Kondratiev's contribution to the dictionaries 451
24.5 The impact of Kondratiev's writings 452
  24.5.1 Schumpeter 453
  24.5.2 Frisch and Tinbergen 454
  24.5.3 Other contributions 455
24.6 The assessment of the modern debate by the recent dictionaries 456
24.7 Conclusion 458

25 Political business cycles
Jan-Peter Olters

25.1 Introduction 463
25.2 Modelling political business cycles 466
  25.2.1 Precursory studies 466
  25.2.2 Strategic politicians and myopic voters 467
  25.2.3 Politics in a rational world 469
  25.2.4 Recent innovations 472
25.3 Concluding remarks 475

26 Nonlinear business cycles in recent dictionaries
Giorgio Colacchio

26.1 Introduction 485
26.2 Nonlinear business cycle in business cycle entries: escaping from the linear world 487
26.3 Nonlinear business cycles in entries related to economic dynamics: into the mysterious realm of nonlinear dynamics 493
26.4 Nonlinear business cycles in dictionaries of the social sciences: towards other lands? 494
26.5 Concluding remarks 495
27 An assessment of real business cycles in recent dictionaries
Marc Pilkington

27.1 Introductory remarks 501
27.2 The emergence of RBC theory 503
  27.2.1 The ill-suited use of 'real business cycles' 503
  27.2.2 Linking the RBC approach with new classical macroeconomics 504
27.3 Why 'real' theories? 505
27.4 Business cycles and stylized facts 509
  27.4.1 Characterization of business cycles 509
  27.4.2 Stylized facts and methodological choices 510
27.5 The integration of growth and fluctuations 513
  27.5.1 Going beyond the dichotomy between growth and business cycles 513
  27.5.2 Random walks and the non-deterministic nature of growth 514
27.6 The calibration method and the construction of general equilibrium models 515
27.7 Real business cycle theory under criticism 517
  27.7.1 Predicting the turning points 517
  27.7.2 The role of technological shocks 517
  27.7.3 Cyclical variations in employment 519
  27.7.4 New econometric challenges 519
  27.7.5 Money neutrality 520
  27.7.6 The evaluation of counter-cyclical fiscal policies 521
27.8 Concluding remarks 522

28 Back to crises: post-war dictionaries and the resilience of an old category
Daniele Besomi and Giorgio Colacchio

28.1 Introduction 526
28.2 Crises as the turning point of the cycle: French language dictionaries 527
28.3 Crises as a branch of Marxian theory vs. the business cycle as bourgeois economics: the case of German dictionaries 531
28.4 Crises as a pathology 533
28.5 Crises in the history of ideas 535
28.6 Crises and cycles as distinct logical categories 538
28.7 The epistemics of crises and cycles theories 539
28.8 Crises vs. cycles 544
Contents

29 A bibliography of specialized dictionaries of economics and related subjects 549
Daniele Besomi

29.1 Introductory remarks 549
29.2 Economic dictionaries, by compiler 550
29.3 Economic dictionaries, by title 590
29.4 General encyclopaedias cited in the text, by title 613

Name and subject index 618
Index of dictionaries and dictionary entries cited 665