Contents

Notes on contributors xiv
Preface xv

1 Walras: pioneer of illuminating complexity 1
WILLIAM J. BAUMOL

2 Léon Walras and monetary economics 8
DAVID LAIDLER

3 The normative origins of general equilibrium theory;
or Walras's attempts at reconciling economic efficiency with social justice 15
PASCAL BRIDEL

4 Walras, Keynes, and the 'Great Recession' 24
RICHARD A. POSNER

5 The stability of general equilibrium—what do we know and why is it important? 34
FRANKLIN M. FISHER

6 The computation of equilibria for the Walrasian model:
a personal account 46
HERBERT E. SCARF

7 Walras, non clearing markets and imperfect competition 74
JEAN-PASCAL BÉNASSY

8 General equilibrium theory and public finance 94
ANTHONY B. ATKINSON

9 Macroeconomics and the uses of general equilibrium 98
ROBERT M. SOLOW

10 Credit instruments and information in general equilibrium 102
KENNETH J. ARROW

11 Walras's unfortunate legacy 109
ALAN KIRMAN

12 On the modernity of Walras 134
ROGER GUESNERIE

Index 145
Notes on contributors

Kenneth J. Arrow, Professor of Economics Emeritus, Stanford University. Nobel Laureate in Economics.

William J. Baumol, Harold Price Professor of Entrepreneurship and Academic Director, Berkley Center for Entrepreneurship and Innovation, New York University; and Senior Economist and Professor Emeritus, Princeton University.

Jean-Pascal Bénassy, CNRS (Centre national de la recherche scientifique) and CEPREMAP, Paris.

Pascal Bridel, Professor of Economics, Centre d'études interdisciplinaires Walras-Pareto, University of Lausanne.

Franklin M. Fisher, Jane Berkowitz Carlton and Dennis William Carlton Professor of Microeconomics, Emeritus, Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Alan Kirman, GREQM, Université Paul Cézanne, Aix-en-Provence, EHESS, IUF.

David Laidler, Professor of Economics Emeritus, The University of Western Ontario.

Richard A. Posner, Judge, US Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit; Senior Lecturer, University of Chicago Law School.

Herbert E. Scarf, Cowles Foundation, Yale University.

Robert M. Solow, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Nobel Laureate in Economics.