Globalization and Precarious Forms of Production and Employment
Challenges for Workers and Unions

Edited by
Carole Thornley
Senior Lecturer, Keele Management School, Keele University, UK

Steve Jefferys
Director, Working Lives Research Institute, London Metropolitan University, UK

Beatrice Appay
Senior Research Fellow, CNRS, France and Visiting Professor, University of California, USA

Edward Elgar
Cheltenham, UK • Northampton, MA, USA
Contents

Notes on contributors vii

1 Introduction: globalization and precarious forms of production and employment: challenges for workers and unions
Carole Thornley, Steve Jefferys and Beatrice Appay 1

2 In the age of Wal-Mart: precarious work and authoritarian management in the global supply chain
Nelson Lichtenstein 10

3 ‘Precarization’ and flexibility in the labour process: a question of legitimacy and a major challenge for democracy
Beatrice Appay 23

4 Legitimating precarious employment: aspects of the post-Fordism and lean production debates
Dan Coffey and Carole Thornley 40

5 Global restructuring of transnational companies: negotiations in the auto industry
Isabel da Costa and Udo Rehfeldt 62

6 Trade unions facing uncertainty in Central and Eastern Europe
Sylvie Contrepois and Steve Jefferys 77

7 Seasonal workers in Mediterranean agriculture: flexibility and insecurity in a sector under pressure
Béatrice Mésini 98

8 The rise in precarious employment and union responses in Australia
Iain Campbell 114

9 Hyper-flexibility in the IT sector: myth or reality?
Isabelle Berrebi-Hoffmann, Michel Lallement, Martine Pernod-Lemattre and François Sarfati 133

10 The increasing use of ‘market’ concepts in negotiations, and contextualizing factors
Jens Thoennes 147
Globalization and precarious forms of production and employment

11 Trade union responses to privatization and restructuring of production in Argentina in the 1990s: similarities and differences in two state-owned companies
Juliana Frassa, Leticia Muñiz Terra and Alejandro Naclerio

12 Organizing and mobilizing precarious workers in France: the case of cleaners in the railways
Heather Connolly

13 Growing power asymmetries, individualization and the continuing relevance of collective responses
Rachid Bouchareb

14 Changing lanes or stuck in the slow lane? Employment precariousness and labour market status of MG Rover workers four years after closure
Alex de Ruyter, David Bailey and Michelle Mahdon

Patrick Chaskiel

Index