Contents

Foreword xvii
Series editor’s preface xx
Preface xxvii
Acknowledgements xxx

PART I
Acquiring a deeper understanding of our country in the process of deepening our understanding of the world (1988–1991)

1 Reform and readjustment – a wise choice as the world faces the 21st century (April 9, 1988) 3

2 The world-wide trend of reform and readjustment and science and culture as essential factors in the great rejuvenation of the Chinese nation (August 7, 1988) 8

3 What kind of a new-emerging economic force
China would be – in response to questions by the correspondent of the “One Billion” magazine of Switzerland (March 11, 1989) 19

4 On the new international order (March 21, 1991) 24
PART II
Urgent need to study “grand strategy” in the context of both internal and external situation

5 Initiate a study of the “grand strategy” centering on national security
(June 1991)

6 A study of the “grand strategy” from the perspective of both domestic and international factors will enable us to seize the opportunity to develop ourselves
(November 12, 1991)

7 “China’s development approach” as seen from “a hundred schools of thought” of the present world on the question of development
(June 20, 1995)

PART III
Deng Xiaoping’s definition of socialism with Chinese characteristics mapped out China’s road of peaceful development

8 Socialism with Chinese characteristics as defined by Deng Xiaoping – “socialism of continuing growth of productive forces” and “socialism in favor of peace” – addresses both China’s domestic and foreign policies
(December 12, 1995)

9 Two historical pursuits of the Chinese people in modern history – speech at the Kennedy Institute of Harvard University
(December 4, 1997)

10 Bear in mind both internal and external situation while actively participating in economic globalization and building socialism with Chinese characteristics independently
(July 1998)
PART IV

A new period of strategic opportunities and a brand new strategic road for the rise of emerging countries modern history has never known (1998–2002) 77

11 Severe test, great changes and great opportunity (December 18, 1998) 79

12 Ideas on outlines of Contemporary World Economy (January 26, 1999) 83

13 Economic globalization and the new period of strategic opportunity in the 21st century (April 12, 2000) 87

14 Fourteen points of Deng Xiaoping’s theory (July 17, 2000) 99

15 The overall strategic situation requires us to Hold Aloft the two banners of peace and development – a summary in the study group on the question of “How to Arrive at the Four Understandings” (October and November 2000) 102

16 Ours is a completely new strategic road of the rise for emerging powers modern history has never known (November 17, 2000) 108

17 Summing up history is to catch up with the times – address at a meeting on the publication of the book The Lingering Light of the Setting Sun (April 2, 2001) 114

Annex: The Lingering Light of the Setting Sun – Emperors Kang Xi and Qian Long’s time of prosperity in the changing situation of the 17th and 18th centuries 116

18 On “strategic thinking” and “strategic road”, and again on the new period of strategic opportunity (December 5, 2001) 127

19 Where is China heading in the 21st century? – speech at the British Royal Academy of strategic studies (January 10, 2002) 137
PART V
China's development is a peaceful development. China's rise is a peaceful rise (2002–2005) 143

20 The Sixteenth National Congress of the Chinese Communist Party and the New Road of China's Peaceful Rise – address at the Center for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS) 145 (December 9, 2002)

21 On new opportunities of China–US relations – address at the US National Committee of Foreign Policy 150 (December 13, 2002)

22 Proposals on initiating a study on “China's development road to peaceful rise” 154 (December 30, 2002)

23 Historical opportunities for the growth of China–European relations and China's new road of peaceful rise – address at the annual meeting on the European situation and on the occasion of the founding of the China–Europe Forum 156 (January 27, 2003)

24 China's development is a peaceful development. China's rise is a peaceful rise – speech for the newly elected deputies to the 10th National People's Congress and the New Members of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference (Abridged) 158 (February 28, 2003)

25 China's peaceful rise is part of the peaceful rise of Asia – address at the 2003 Bo’ao Forum for Asia 168 (November 3, 2003)

27 Speech at the International Seminar jointly sponsored by China Reform Forum and Bo’ao Forum for Asia in 2004 184 (April 2004)

29 A ten-point explanation on “China’s development road of peaceful rise” – address at the World Summit Forum in Europe (September 3, 2004) 203

30 “Peaceful rise” and “peaceful development” are one and the same thing – answers to questions by Ye Xiaoshen, writer and commentator of Shanghai Oriental TV (OTV) on “China’s development road of peaceful rise” (September 10, 2004) 207

31 Proposals on increasing contact and academic exchanges with Europe regarding “China’s development road of peaceful rise” (October 11, 2004) 221

32 Speech at the International Seminar jointly sponsored by China Reform Forum, Bo’ao Forum for Asia and Asia Society of the US in 2005 (April 22, 2005)

Summary address: I stand for proceeding from the facts rather than concepts 232

33 Promote the study, discussion and publicity of “China’s peaceful development road” in the context of the domestic and international situation (May 14, 2005) 235

PART VI
China will emerge in the world as a “Peaceful Nation” and a “Civilized Nation” (2005–2006) 239

34 China’s peaceful rise and the deep-going changes of Chinese society (May 19, 2005) 241

35 Again on new opportunities of China–US relations – speech at Luncheon of the National Committee on US–China relations in New York (Abridged) (June 13, 2005) 245

36 Ten-point views on China’s new road of peaceful rise and China–US relations (Excerpt) – speech at the Brookings Institution in Washington (June 15, 2005) 248
37 China's peaceful rise serves the purpose of strengthening itself – article carried in the US bi-monthly Foreign Affairs (September 2005) 254

38 Peaceful rise and rejuvenation of civilization: China is a staunch force in maintenance of world peace – speech at the high-level seminar on East Asian Regional Cooperation and China–US Relations (November 3, 2005) 259

39 China's rise is a peaceful rise. The rejuvenation of the Chinese Nation is the rejuvenation of its civilization – speech at the Beijing Regional Conference of the Asia-Pacific Working Group of the “Trilateral Commission” (November 25, 2005) 264

40 A peaceful and civilized China and China–Europe relations – keynote speech at the Symposium on Sino-European Strategy (December 6, 2005) 269

41 China will emerge in the world as a “Peaceful, Civilized and Amicable Nation” – speech at the “China Sciences and Humanities Forum” (April 9, 2006) 274

43 Chinese Road, Chinese Dream, Chinese Heart – speech at the Second World China Studies Forum (September 21, 2006) 290

44 Several views on “Convergence of Interests” and “Communities of Interests” between China and the US – outlook on China’s development and China–US relations in the second decade of the 21st century – speech at Stanford University (January 26, 2011) 296

Notes 303

Index 310