Cluster-Based Industrial Development

A Comparative Study of Asia and Africa

Tetsushi Sonobe
and Keijiro Otsuka
Contents

List of Illustrations viii
Preface xiv

1 Introduction: The Scope and Significance of the Study 1
1.1 Why focus on industrial clusters? 1
1.2 Causes of growing and stagnating clusters 4
1.3 In search of key growth drivers 8
1.4 Scope of the study 10

Part I The Role of Traders in Cluster Development

2 Overseas Vietnamese Traders in a Garment Cluster in Vietnam 15
2.1 Historical background and the production system 16
2.2 Characteristics of sample enterprises 21
2.3 Estimation methods and results 29
2.4 Concluding remarks 37

3 Petty Traders in a Garment Cluster in Kenya 39
3.1 Garment clusters in Nairobi 41
3.2 Characteristics of sample enterprises 43
3.3 Estimation methods and results 49
3.4 Concluding remarks 59

Part II The Role of Managerial Human Capital in the Upgrading Process

4 The Product Ladder in the Steel Bar Industry in Vietnam 65
4.1 Historical background and hypotheses 67
4.2 Characteristics of sample enterprises 73
4.3 Estimation methods and results 78
4.4 Concluding remarks 93
Contents

5 The Move to the Formal Sector in the Metalwork Industry in Kenya 95
  5.1 Metalwork cluster in Nairobi 97
  5.2 Characteristics of sample enterprises 102
  5.3 Estimation methods and results 108
  5.4 Concluding remarks 117

Part III The China Shock and Quality Improvement

6 The Coping Strategy of the Electrical Fittings Industry in Pakistan 121
  6.1 An overview of the Sargodha electrical fittings cluster 123
  6.2 Quality improvement and testable hypotheses 128
  6.3 Characteristics of sample enterprises 133
  6.4 Estimation methods and results 137
  6.5 Concluding remarks 146

7 The V-Shaped Growth in the Leather Shoe Industry in Ethiopia 148
  7.1 A comparative perspective and hypotheses 150
  7.2 Characteristics of sample enterprises 152
  7.3 Estimation methods and results 161
  7.4 Concluding remarks 167

Part IV The Success and Failure of Industrial Development Strategies

8 International Knowledge Transfer in a Garment Cluster in Bangladesh 171
  8.1 Historical background and hypotheses 173
  8.2 Characteristics of sample enterprises 179
  8.3 Estimation methods and results 184
  8.4 Concluding remarks 193

9 Misfired Promotion of the Export-Oriented Garment Industry in Ethiopia 195
  9.1 Promotion policy and testable hypotheses 197
  9.2 Characteristics of sample enterprises 200
  9.3 Estimation methods and results 210
  9.4 Concluding remarks 217
10 Conclusion: Towards the Design of Effective Industrial Development Policies

10.1 Development of industrial clusters: A comparative perspective

10.2 Key growth drivers

10.3 A model of endogenous development of industrial clusters reconsidered

10.4 Strategy for cluster development

Notes

References

Author Index

Subject Index