Post Keynesian Macroeconomic Theory, Second Edition
Contents

1 The background for Keynes's revolution .......................... 1
2 The essential difference between the general theory and the classical system .......................... 13
3 Taxonomy, axioms and expenditures related to income:
   Keynes's $D_1$ category ........................................ 33
4 Investment spending .............................................. 63
5 Government and the level of output .................................. 87
6 Delving further into the relationship between money, liquidity and uncertainty .................. 97
7 Liquidity preference – the basis of Keynes's revolution .................................................. 114
8 The finance motive and the interdependence of the real and monetary sectors .................................................. 127
9 Financial markets, fast exits and great depressions and recessions .................................................. 147
10 Inflation: causes and cures ........................................... 166
11 Keynes's aggregate supply and demand analysis .................................................. 190
12 The demand and supply of labour ........................................ 200
13 Money in an international setting ......................................... 224
14 Trade imbalances and international payments .................................................. 239
15 International liquidity and exchange rate stability .................................................. 265
16 Financing the wealth of nations ........................................... 275
17 Export-led growth and a proposal for an international payments scheme .................................................. 284
18 Epilogue: truth in labelling and economic textbooks .................................................. 320

Index ........................................... 337