Contents

List of tables and figures vii
Acknowledgments viii

1 Introduction 1
(Re)uniting the material and the cultural 2
Military gender integration in the US 3
Military gender ideologies in media representations 4
War and gender as an interdisciplinary research field 6

2 Relations between the material and the cultural 10
Materialism as a research strategy 10
Media representations as an object of social science research 17
The media, the military, and political elites in the US 19
Critical Historical Discourse Analysis as a tool for text analysis 21

3 Gender, state, and the military 25
State formation, militarization, and women's exclusion:
  historical interrelations 25
Rationalization and professionalization of the US military:
  the roots of women's integration 30
Downsizing and gender equality: the 1990s and beyond 37
Gender policies as reactions to changing recruitment conditions 42
The Services 44
State transformation and military privatization 47
Transformation of military gender ideologies 48

4 Military gender ideologies in the media 52
The first step: contents of media discourses 52
The second step: contextualization 76
Professionalized military women in the "Techno War":
  (phase 1: 1990–1994) 78
Contents

Sexualized intruders into the male bond (phase 2: 1995–1999) 92
Patriotic heroines in the “War on Terror” (phase 3: 2000–2005) 100

5 Conclusions 118

Relations between the material and the cultural 118
Structural change in US military and society 119
Change of military gender ideologies 121
The early 1990s 124
The late 1990s 126
The “War on Terror” 127
Groups of actors and lines of conflict 128
Gender, state, and the military 133

Notes 135
References 137
Index 150