The Treaty Port Economy in Modern China
Empirical Studies of Institutional Change and Economic Performance

Edited by
Billy K. L. So and Ramón H. Myers
Contents

Acknowledgments xii
Contributors ix

1. Modern China’s Treaty Port Economy in Institutional Perspective: An Introductory Essay 1
   Billy K. L. So

PART ONE: Institutional Change and Economic Growth

2. The Rise of Modern Shanghai, 1900–1936: An Institutional Perspective 33
   Debin Ma

3. The Shanghai Real Estate Market and Capital Investment, 1860–1936 47
   Tomoko Shiroyama

4. The Rice and Wheat Flour Market Economies in the Lower Yangzi, 1900–1936 75
   Kai-yiu Chan

5. The Regional Development of Wei County’s Cotton Textile Market Economy, 1920–1937 96
   Hon-ming Yip

6. Chinese Farmer Rationality and the Agrarian Economy of the Lower Yangzi in the 1930s 118
   James Kai-sing Kung, Daniel Yiu-fai Lee, and Nansheng Bai

PART TWO: Dynamics in Institutional Change

7. Traditional Land Rights in Hong Kong’s New Territories 147
   Kentaro Matsubara

8. Chinese Enterprises across Cultures: The Hong Kong Business Experience in the Early Twentieth Century 172
   Stephanie Po-yin Chung

   Billy K. L. So and Albert S. Lee

Bibliography 211
Index 249