The European Union and Multilateral Trade Governance
The politics of the Doha Round

Arlo Poletti
List of tables

- x

Preface

- xi

Acknowledgments

- xiii

Abbreviations

- xvi

Introduction

- 1

  - The new trade politics  2
  - The argument: trade policies determine trade politics  4
  - Why investigate the European Union?  7
  - Case selection and methodology  9
  - Structure of the book  11

1 Making sense of multiple trade politics

- 13

  - The dependent variable: integrating the 'whom' and the 'how' of the trade politics  20
  - Explaining variation across types  26
  - Preliminary snapshot of case-studies  34

2 Pressure politics in agricultural negotiations

- 37

  - The political economy of agricultural negotiations  38
  - The vulnerability of the EU's agricultural sectors  42
  - The first phase of negotiations: a dynamic defense of the status quo  45
  - Domestic reform: changing everything to change nothing  49
Contents

The second phase of negotiations: something in exchange for the new status quo? 52
Alternative explanations 58
Concluding remarks 61

3 Deliberative politics in trade-and-competition negotiations 64
The political economy of trade-and-competition 65
Approaching the Doha Round: understanding the preference for a binding WTO agreement 69
From Doha to Cancún: a reality check on EU ambitions 80
Alternative explanations 85
Concluding remarks 88

4 Civil politics in trade-and-environment negotiations 89
The political economy of trade-and-environment 90
The EU's early approach to trade-and-environment: from paying lip service to active support for a greener WTO 95
Approaching the Doha Round: explaining the EU's sudden environmental activism 97
The Doha compromise: a temporary halt on EU ambitions 107
After Doha: bringing trade-and-environment in from the back door? 110
Alternative explanations 113
Concluding remarks 119

5 Executive politics in technical assistance and capacity building negotiations 120
The political economy of TACB 122
An overview of negotiations and EU offers 127
Donor-driven priorities 130
The timing of proposals and the amount of resources 133