Demystifying the Chinese Miracle
The rise and future of relational capitalism

Yongqin Wang
Contents

List of figures and tables xiii
Acknowledgements xv

1 Introduction 1
Motivations and questions 1
Contributions and conclusions 3
Structure of the book 6

2 Interlinking markets, relational contracts and economic transition 9
Single-market relational contracts: a benchmark case 11
Interlinking markets and relational contracts 16
Relational contracts and the underlying mechanism of economic transition: China versus Russia 24
Concluding remarks 26

3 Markets, contracts and economic growth 28
Market expansion decision and economic growth 32
Capital accumulation, economic growth and market expansion 35
Transaction cost, factor complementarity and growth:
the past and the present 36
By way of conclusion: market size, division of labor and contractual forms 41

4 Interlinked contracts and development: where do we stand? 43
Contractual structure in a traditional society 44
The rationale and advantages of interlinked contracts 45
Limitations of interlinked contracts 52
Concluding remarks: development and dynamics of interlinked relational contracts 55
5 Unraveling the Chinese miracle: a perspective of interlinked relational contracts

Economic development and governance: an analytical framework 58
The township and village enterprise as an interlinked contract 61
Reform in the financial sector reconsidered 63
Reform of state-owned enterprises reconsidered 68
Concluding remarks 70

6 The East Asian Development Model reconsidered with implications for China

State and economic development: industrial policies as an interlinked relational contract 75
How industrial policies were implemented 78
Law, social norm and economic development 82
Transition of the East Asian Developmental Model 83
General lessons from the EADM 85

7 Costs and benefits of relational contracting in China’s transition

Relational society in China: a historical account 93
The role of relational governance in China’s transition 95
The role of relational governance in transition: a theoretical summary 100
Economic development and the gradual dismantling of relational governance 102
Concluding remarks 105

Notes 108
References 111
Index 117
Figures and tables

Figures

1.1 The relationship between economic development and institutional changes 6
2.1 Potential Pareto improvements with relational contracts 14
2.2 The dynamics of relational contracts and formal contracts 26
3.1 Changes in per capita GDP in China and Western Europe, 400–1998 AD 30
3.2 A linear city model 33
3.3 Growth pattern without changes in transaction cost and factor complementarity 37
3.4 Growth pattern with changing transaction cost, keeping factor complementarity constant 39
3.5 Growth pattern with both changing transaction cost and factor complementarity 40
5.1 Financial flow among stakeholders in TVEs 64
5.2 The comprehensive package for non-performing loans 68
6.1 Economic development and institutional change under the EADM 88
7.1 Dynamics of development and institutional change 105

Tables

1.1 The rule of law index 2
5.1 China’s TVEs, 1983–88 62
5.2 Sources of start-up capital of the sample private firms 65
5.3 Access to banks and credit cooperatives 66
5.4 The making of non-performing loans 67
6.1 International comparison of legal systems (1997) 83
7.1 Household savings in China 95
7.2 Percentage receiving instrumental and financial support by source and rural/urban residence 96
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Figures and tables</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>7.3 The potential for risk sharing</td>
<td>97</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.4 Transfers received inside versus outside the village</td>
<td>97</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.5 Informal finance in China</td>
<td>98</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.6 Perceived most efficient conflict resolutions in the Yangtze delta</td>
<td>101</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7.7 Percentage of flow of in-migration to cities, towns and rural townships</td>
<td>104</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>